3 Killed in Attack On Beirut Airport

BEIRUT (AP) — Arab terrorists attacked Beirut International Airport today, spraying Lebanese security men and civilians with machine-gun fire in an apparent attempt to hijack an airliner. Police said three persons were killed and 14 wounded.

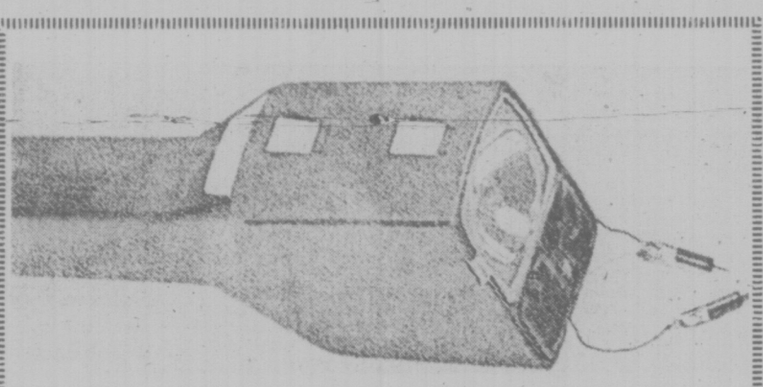
One of the gunmen was among those killed in a shoot-out with police and army commandos guarding the terminal. Two other gunmen were wounded and captured.

Police and Palestinian guerrilla sources said the gunmen probably wanted to use the hijacking to sabotage the Sinai peace accord between Egypt and Israel. There was also speculation they wanted to disrupt the ceasefire in Lebanon's factional warfare between Christians and Moslems.

The Palestine news agency WAFA said a fourth terrorist, who drove the car that carried the gunmen to the airport, was later turned over to police by the security arm of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Unofficial sources said the terrorists carried papers showing two of them to be Palestinian, one Syrian and one Libyan.

Police said an army commando and an Egyptian woman waiting for a flight to Cairo were also killed. Besides the two gunmen, the wounded included six Egyptians, a Lebanese airline employee, four policemen and an army commando.



WEAPON A SHOCKER

REDONDO BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Michael Mattingly, 24, and a friend heard noises Thursday in the garage below Mattingly's apartment. When they investigated they surprised burglars who were stealing a motorcycle, bicycle and car parts.

Then a flashlight shone in his eyes. Mattingly told police, and he heard what sounded like "the pop of a .22" and felt stinging sensations in his abdomen and arm.

An instant later, an electric shock coursed through his body, bringing him to his knees as the burglars fled.

Mattingly thus became the second person to be on the wrong end of the Taser, a new electric dart gun, in criminal hands.

Recently, a woman in Miami, Fla., robbed a gas station and used aTaser to immobilize an attendant who described the sensation as "like sticking your finger in a wall socket . . . the worst pain I ever felt."

The device may gain popularity with criminals who want to avoid charges of committing a crime with a deadly weapon — the Taser immobilizes but does not kill.

The weapon, manufactured by Advanced Chemical Technology of Arcadia, Calif., fires two barbs attached to 18 feet of wire. When they pierce the skin, the operator can sendcan send a 50,000 volt electrical charge into the target's body from the Taser's six batteries, causing uncontrollable spasms. The operator can turn the current on and off, controling the victim as long as the barbs, which do no serious harm themselves, remain imbedded in the skin.

More than 1,000 have been sold and the firm is now producing 200 a week.

Shuffle Reaction Mixed

Social Credit leader Bill Bennett latched on to a neat analogy and dubbed Premier Barrett a joker who "can't end a three year losing streak . . . because he's used the same old deck to deal another bad hand for the people of B.C."

Barrett just re-arranged an incompetent cabinet, said Bennett, and the moves will do nothing to solve the problems of B.C.

The only positive change Bennett said he saw in the new cabinet postings is that Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich, as the new finance minister, can "at least add."

Bennett said he saw "no improvement" in the shifting of the mines portfolio from Leo Nimsick to Economic Development Minister Gary Lauk and said he has no reason to believe Delta MLA Carl Liden will be an improvement as transport and communications minister.

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson said he is glad Nimsick is now travel minister "because he created a lot of closed down mines and now he can promote them as tourist attractions."

Both Gibson and Tory leader Scott Wallace had kind words for Robert Strachan who resigned as transport minister and is heading for London to serve as B.C.'s agent-general.

"I don't want to say anything in the slightest negative about Strachan now that he's gone," said Gibson.

His appointment, said Gibson, "is recognition of a long and distinguished life of public service in B.C."

The Liberal said he wished Liden luck in his new post and "almost anybody" would be better than Barrett as finance minister.

As for the mines portfolio, Gibson said changing ministers will not help — the government must reverse its mining taxation policies.

Wallace said the changes mark an improvement and strengthening of the cabinet but he, like others, was disappointed to see more double portfolios.

The combination of mining and economic development under Lauk will be a heavy one, he said, as will agriculture and finance under Stupich.

Wallace said it was sad to see Strachan dumped from the cabinet after his 22 years of service as an MLA, espe-

Propane Vote Today

Voting began today on a tentative settlement to end the eight-week-old propane distributors strike.

Members of the Teamsters Union and the Transport Labor Relations Association are voting on a proposed settlement reached Friday after meetings with Labor Minister Bill King.

King said he told both groups during meetings Thursday and Friday, the public interest was at stake and unless they came to some agreement before 4 p.m. Friday he would recommend cabinet "take immediate steps."

The minister declined to specify what action cabinet would have taken but said the government is still ready and willing to move if either party rejects the settlement.

King was notified by phone shortly after 4 p.m. that negotiators for the two sides in Vancouver had come to an agreement and were willing to put it to their memberships.

The minister said he is "not in the business of making threats" and he did not want to discuss any ultimatums made to both parties but he said the public interest "must be supreme."

The strike has cut off propane and butane supplies to most B.C. users since July 21.

Hardest hit is the Nanaimo area where about 1,400 customers on a domestic grid system have been without propane since stocks ran out last week.

The proposals are believed to be going before the Teamster membership without a recommendation for acceptance or rejection from the negotiating committee.

Vancouver drivers are voting today, Vancouver Island members will vote Sunday and other votes in B.C. will be conducted during the week.

Results of the Transport Labor Relations vote are expected early next week.

Mirabel Opening Protested

STE. SCHOLASTIQUE, Que. (CP) — Police lobbed tear gas into a group of about 300 jeering demonstrators protesting the opening today of Mirable International Airport by Prime Minister Trudeau and Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa.

The demonstrators, farmers whose land was expropriated for the airport, fled their vantage point behind a fence about 200 yards from the terminal building. No injuries were reported.

Earlier, police had prevented the group from entering airport grounds.

Police refused to comment on the incident which occurred immediately after Trudeau and Bourassa officially opened the airport.

Witnesses said the demonstrators had parked trucks containing hay near the fence.

In his opening address, Trudeau described the airport as "essential for Montreal, for Quebec and for the whole country."

Had there been any doubts, he said "the regrettable defection which is forcing us to abandon the Pickering project would have cured us of that very quickly."

The Pickering international airport project near Toronto was shelved, at least temporarily, when the Ontario government announced last week it would not provide services to the project.

The Ontario government feared environmental damage and questioned the need for increasing Toronto's aviation facilities.

KNIGHT SUES

VANCOUVER (CP) — Stanley B. Knight on Friday filed a supreme court damage suit against the provincial government and Education Minister Eileen Dailly.

Knight claims unspecified damages for alleged wrongful dismissal last Jan. 14 as director of the research and development division of department of education in Victoria.

Persistence Pays Off For City Sweeps Winner

"You have to have a ticket to make a dream come true."

It was that philosophy that prompted Mrs. Floralea Wakeham of Victoria to buy every Irish sweepstake ticket she could get her hands on "as far back as I can remember."

And it paid off in thousands today.

Mrs. Wakeham, 2766 Ronald, drew a $40,600 winner in the Irish Hospitals Sweepstakes with the horse Dance All Night.

She's been holding her breath ever since The Times notified her Friday morning that her ticket bearing the pseudonym Riksu was drawn in Dublin Thursday in preparation for the Cambridgeshire Handicap at Newmarket run today.

Mrs. Wakeham headed off for work as usual Friday. She's supervisor of accounts payable for the B.C. Ferries and spent the day "hoping" and "rationalizing" — but mostly rationalizing.

Dance All Night wasn't considered a favorite. In fact the odds were 33-to-1 he'd place and there was no use in getting her hopes up.

She heard nothing all day and went to bed at 9 p.m.

It was this morning she heard.

Lottogrift, a 33 to 1 shot ridden by Roger Werham, won the Irish Sweeps, and one neck behind was Dance All Night.

Idiot's Delight a 50-to-1 shot, finished third, another neck back in the one-mile, 220 yard race. But the results weren't finalized yet.

After the close result Grenville Starkey, who rode Idiot's Delight, lodged a claim of foul against Dance All Night, but the objection was over-ruled after a steward's inquiry.

At 8 this morning the telegraph office confirmed her winnings.

Four Canadians — three from B.C. — had tickets on Lottogift.

Ulster Group Outlawed

BELFAST (UPI) — British officials today outlawed the Protestant Ulster Volunteer Force in Northern Ireland in an attempt to ward off a growing threat of civil war.

Security officials were put on alert against a new wave of bombings and assassinations following a threat by the UVF to step up their attack against the Irish Republican Army.

The extremist UVF, a loyalist Protestant group, claimed responsibility for the violence that killed at least 12 persons Thursday and Friday and British officials warned that the troubled province was moving close to civil war.

"Their actions are an offence against society," Rees said. "In consequence they no longer have the right to be treated as members of a legal organization."

Meanwhile in Limerick the giant Dutch-owned Farenka factory complied today with a major demand of the kidnappers of its managing director and closed its gates for 24 hours.

The action broke with the tough stand of the Irish government, which has announced it would not deal with the suspected Irish Republican Army raiders.

Tiede Herrema, 51, was kidnapped Friday outside his Limerick home by four men as he left for work.

In telephone calls to the Dutch embassy and Dublin newspapers the kidnappers said they would kill Herrema unless three members of the IRA were released from prison — including British heiress Bridget Rose Dugdale — and the factory was closed "as a sign of good faith." Dugdale, 33, is serving a nine-year sentence for a $20 million art theft near Dublin at the home of South African millionaire Sir Alfred Beit.

Portuguese Gov't Losing Control

Times News Services

LISBON — The government is no longer in full control of Lisbon, Portuguese Prime Minister Jose Pinheiro de Azevedo said today, accusing the far left of dragging Portugal toward civil war.

Military authorities, meanwhile, closed a northern military installation where rebellious troops protested the transfer of two leftist soldiers.

"At the moment, the government does not have the complete possibility of governing in Lisbon," he said. "In Lisbon, the government faces great opposition from the extreme left and other leftists."

Azevedo said in an interview with the weekly newspaper Expresso the breakdown in military discipline "is based on leftist propaganda that has influenced some military units in Lisbon and its suburbs."

He said the breakdown in authority came dangerously close to an armed confrontation between Lisbon military units on Thursday, when the Socialists accused extreme leftists of planning a coup, but he said the situation was at least temporarily defused.

"I still fear that some individuals could be thinking about involving themselves in an adventure," he said.

The prime minister said that while a conflict between rival military units was still a possibility, he hoped to resolve disputes "without an explosion."

MARSEILLE (UPI) — Five patients were killed by a flash fire in a clinic for respiratory ailments police said today.

Postal Report Delayed

OTTAWA (CP) — The conciliation board dealing with the contract dispute between the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) and the post office has been given until Tuesday midnight to submit its report.

The extension likely will set back the earliest possible date for a postal strike to Oct. 15, if the parties do not settle.

Meanwhile, the government has taken steps to have its family allowance and pension cheques mailed out early for the second month in a row.

A government spokesman said Friday that the cheques would be delivered to the post office for mailing Monday. Normally family allowance cheques go out on the 20th of the month and pensions are sent out prior to the last three banking days in the month.

The government also sent out the cheques early in September, when there was a possibility of a strike by the 22,000 members of the union. CUPW includes mail sorters and postal clerks.

Among major issues remaining in dispute are wages, post office automation, use of casual non-union labor, hours of work and fringe benefits.

A Word from the Emperor . . .

By SALLY QUINN

WASHINGTON (WP) — To most people in the United States the White House seems a very glamorous place to be and White House dinners sound particularly exciting. What most people don't understand is that, for the president and his wife, those dinners can often be very hard work. Thursday night at the dinner for Emperor Hirohito the Fords earned their salary.

It's making conversation that's the real killer. Especially when your guests don't speak English too well. And His Majesty, the 74-year-old Emperor of the Chrysanthemum Throne, seemed prone to a number of "Ah so's" ("Oh, really," in Japanese).

There was a two-hour-long dinner, with Mrs. Ford seated between Prime Minister Fukuda and the emperor and the president between the emperor and the empress.

After dinner and the entertainment, Mrs. Ford walked into the Blue Room chattering away with the empress and her translator, and the president was left with the diminutive emperor, who appears not to see very well.

President: "It's certainly warm in there."

Emperor: "Ah so."

President: "The ladies seem to be having quite a time over there."

Emperor: "Ah so."

Emperor: "Ah so."

President: "That was quite a harbor."

Emperor: . . .

Grain Fire Investigated

NORTH VANCOUVER (CP) — Three government agencies plan investigations into Friday's explosion and fire at a grain elevator tower on Burrard Inlet which killed one man and injured 16 others.

The provincial fire marshal's branch, the accident prevention branch of the federal labor department and the North Vancouver city fire department's prevention branch all said they would try to find out what caused the multi-million-dollar inferno which occurred when massive explosions ripped apart a 400-foot tower.

Burrard Terminals Ltd., owned by James Richardson and Sons Ltd. of Winnipeg, also will carry out its own investigation, along with Local 333 of the Grain Workers Union.

The explosions were followed by a fierce blaze which turned the elevator into a white-hot torch for two hours before being brought under control by land and sea firefighters from three municipalities.

Edward Hooper of North Vancouver, a grain weighman working on the top floor who apparently helped two colleagues escape, was reported missing and presumed dead.

The injured workers were taken to a North Vancouver hospital and eight of the more seriously injured were transferred to the intensive care and burn units at nearby Vancouver General Hospital.

Three of the injured were listed in critical condition.

One of the injured was treated in North Vancouver and released. A fireman cut his wrist on a broken window and also was treated and released.

Mike Kinney, 25, an employee for 1½ years with the Canadian grain commission, said his ground-floor office next to the elevator where where the fire apparently started, exploded.

"The force knocked me back and then a sheet of flames came by here," he said in a hospital interview, putting his hand out several feet from his head.

"After the first explosion the flames rolled out like a wave. My boss got blown right by me in a sheet of flame.

"I jumped up from the desk and was getting ready to jump out the window when the second blast came and knocked me through."

Kinney said he twisted his leg. He said he made his way to hospital and was later released.

Witnesses said some of the injured had the clothes burned from their bodies as they fled.

Electrician Barney Chapman, who escaped injury because he was in an adjacent storage shed getting equipment, said he heard two explosions in quick succession.

"There was a fire in the conveyor belt at the top floor where it brings up grain to be weighed," said Chapman. "Some of the guys were fighting with extinguishers . . . it must have started by friction."

'Dream' Pays Off For City Woman

Eugene Halferty, 21, a bachelor who lives with two brothers in downtown Vancouver, said he's going to see his bank manager and clear up some debts with his $150,000 prize.

"I'm going to see my ticket seller right now and then I'm going to maybe get drunk or something or celebrate," Halferty said.

Halferty is an autobody worker. He said he will take a few days off.

Another winner is Greg Nichol, 23, a B.C. Hydro inspector at Mount Lehman. His mother said she hasn't seen him since he borrowed her car Friday night, saying he was going to Vancouver.

The third B.C. winner was Toivo Kokkkinen of Powell River. J. R. Walkem of Victoria won $40,00 on second-place Dance All Night while third-place Idiot's Delight won $20,000 for Lynne Gibson of Chilliwack.

The pseudonym Flying Swallow of Ste. Agatha, Ont., also had a winning ticket.

Two other Canadians held tickets on Dance All Night: 1625 Cafe, La Salle, Que., and Michael Dana, of Red Deer, Alta.

Canadians with tickets on Idiot's Delight, expected to bring in about $20,300, were G. Brown of Ottawa and Lynne Gibson of Chilliwack, B.C.

Riksu, Mrs. Wakeham's winning psyeudonym, was the combined names of her two pets — Rickie, a poodle and Susie, a poodle cocker.

Mrs. Wakeham said she'll continue to work, as will her husband, Jim, and the winnings will mean no major change to their lifestyle. They have no children, but scores of relatives and Jim has been handling their congratulatory phone calls all day.

And the money?

"We're just the same as everyone else with mortgage payments.

"We bought the house two years ago and we've been trying to pay it off piece-meal, room by room." Her winnings will more than handle the rooms that are left.

But first things first. It'll be tonight, after 24 long hours of expectation, that the Wakeham's will celebrate.

They plan to Dance All Night.

Missing Teenagers Found

PORT ALBERNI (CP) — Seven missing teen-agers were found today after being reported missing Friday and camping overnight in 10-degree (Celsius) temperatures and rainfall.

The teen-agers, aged 14 to 17, were all from this Port Alberni community and five of them were girls. No names were released.

About 20 volunteers were searching for the missing group today when they walked out of the Nahmint Lake area, southwest of here.

The seven teen-agers were part of a group of 17 young persons who made the five-mile hike into the lake area Thursday and camped there overnight. The missing group left the area ahead of the others on the return trip but failed to appear at the area where the group's vehicles were parked.

The seven apparently found their way back to the campsite and stayed there Friday night, setting off for home once again early today.

An RCMP spokesman said the group was in good condition when found although the teen-agers lacked rain gear and provisions for an extended trip into the heavily wooded and mountainous area.

'Upset' Plea Accepted

A man who pleaded guilty in provincial court today to driving while under suspension received a light sentence from Judge D. R. Campbell after telling the court that his irrational behavior was due to a family dispute.

Donald Peter Champion, 1516 Garnet, was fined $100 and given a month to pay.

"The normal fine is $400 but I accept what you say," said the judge.

Champion was stopped by police at 3.10 a.m. today when he was observel on Cook street going through a red light at Douglas and Bay.

His breath smelled of liquor and police placed him on a 24-hour suspension. But 15 minutes later, Champion was observed driving his car north on Cook. He was arrested.

The judge asked the accused why he had done this.

"A family dispute," he replied.

Champion said following a family dispute his wife left him.

"When I got home she had gone," he said. "I was upset."

Voyage Completed

HALIFAX (CP) — Two Victoria based oceanographic ships arrived in port here Friday after navigating the treacherous Northwest Passage in 16 days.

The Theta and Pandora II, owned by Christensen Canadian Enterprises Ltd. of Halifax and on charter to the federal environment department, were being used by West Coast oceanographers for environmental impact studies in the Beaufort Sea.

Last month they found their western route blocked by a dense Arctic ice pack and headed east through the Northwest Passage from the Mackenzie River delta area.

Nimsick, Strachan Philosophical on Switch

Leo Nimsick said Friday as B.C.'s new travel minister he hopes to do some travelling.

"Well, I'm travel minister so I guess maybe I'll do some travelling," said Nimsick in an interview following the swearing-in ceremony at Government House which saw one addition to the provincial cabinet, one resignation and several shifted portfolios.

Nimsick, who won't, serve long as travel minister since he has already announced he will not seek re-election, said he would like to have stayed on as mines minister but doesn't see his shift to travel as a demotion.

"It's one of the problems of politics — maybe I was born 30 years too soon," said the 67-year-old Kootenay MLA who has served the longest tenure ever in the B.C. legislature.

Bob Strachan, B.C.'s second-longest serving MLA, was also philosophical about the cabinet shuffle which saw him removed from the transport and communications ministry and appointed agent-general in London.

"For 37 years I've been running for office of one kind or another . . . so I naturally have mixed emotions about separating myself from active political life," he said.

The first agent-general resigned as premier to take the job, said Strachan, adding that it will be "a new life experience."

He indicated he had told Barrett four months ago he would not likely be seeking re-election next term and was interested in stepping down.

B.C.'s newest cabinet minister, NDP Delta MLA Carl Liden, said his main concern as transport and communications minister will be the B.C. Ferries system.

Liden said he is glad responsibility for the Insurance Corporation of B.C. is being handed over to Provincial secretary Ernie Hall so his post will be lighter to start with.

Expansion of the ferry service will be his uppermost concern, he said, and he will aim to have the ferries serve "people instead of automobiles."

Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich expressed obvious enthusiasm at taking over the finance portfolio and said keeping B.C. within a balanced budget will be his main objective.

Stupich, who is a chartered accountant, said he didn't anticipate any problems trying to extricate the finance job from the premier's office where it has rested for more than 20 years.

"The premier has made a point of putting absolute trust in his ministers and I don't think it will be difficult to take over."

Economic Development Minister Gary Lauk said he will be devoting the major portion of his time to his new mines portfolio but he agrees with combining the two jobs since "the operations arm can fit in with the resources branch."

Mineral royalty legislation will be under constant review, said Lauk, and his main concern will be to encourage secondary industry, likely through changes in abatement allowances for processing.

cially the many years he put in as NDP opposition leader and former premier W.A.C. Bennett's toughest critic.

The removal of Strachan and demotion of Nimsick to the minor portfolio of travel are seen as attempts by the premier to take some heat off the government in two sensitive areas.

Nimsick has been closely identified with the mineral royalties legislation, blamed for the dramatic slump in mining exploration and development in B.C., and Strachan has been the focus of the long and bitter opposition criticism of the Insurance Corporation of B.C.

Ernie Hall, who stays on as provincial secretary, is taking over responsibility for ICBC and it is hoped he can keep a tighter reign on the troublesome post.

B.C. employers' council president Bill Hamilton said. "The changes amount to a reshuffling of deck chairs on the Titanic."

Grit to Seek By-Election

Tothill, a Liberal, is the only nominated candidate in the riding soon to be vacated by former Transport Minister Bob Strachan and he thinks it is "only fair" a by-election is called soon.

Premier Barrett said Friday his government will not consider holding a by-election until electoral redistribution which will probably come at the fall session of the legislature.

But he made no commitment an election will be held even then to find a replacement for Strachan, who is resigning as part of the cabinet shuffle to be agent-general in London.

All Cowichan-Malahat constituency matters will be handled by the premier's office from now on, said Barrett.

But Tothill, who was nominated by the Liberals April 23, thinks it is unfair if the constituency does not have a full-time member. He said Victoria Liberal MLA David Anderson has promised him he will bring up any matters in the legislature Tothill feels needs to be dealt with but that isn't really sufficient.

"The government has always called by-elections right away when an opposition member resigns. I think its only fair they do the same now, not wait until the next election," said Tothill.

"There'll probably be an election next year but they don't have to have it until Aug. 30, 1977, — that's a long time away."

the weather

A series of rapidly moving disturbances crossing southern B.C. continue to give unsettled weather to the province. Rain and gale force winds accompanies the latest in the series overnight over southwestern sections.

Generally cloudy skies and showers with cool termperatures are expected for the weekend across the province. Periods of rain will likely accompany the next Pacific disturbance over south coast areas Sunday.

FOOT FONDLER STRIKES AGAIN

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UPI)—A woman was attacked by a foot fancier Friday as she walked to work on a downtown street. It was the third such attack reported in the past few months.

The woman, 34, told police a man in his 20s knocked her down, grabbed her leg, removed her shoe and began kissing her foot. She said it all happened so fast she didn't get an accurate description of her admirer.

Two other females' feet have been fondled within six blocks of the site of Friday's attack.

One drove away the man with screams; the other squirted her fancier with chemical spray as he kissed her toes.

Idi Amin Labelled Racist Murderer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — United Nations Ambassador Daniel Moynihan called President Idi Amin of Uganda a "racist murderer" Friday and said he hopes African leaders will repudiate all Amin stands for.

In a speech to the AFL-CIO national convention, Moynihan said it is no accident that Amin heads the Organization of African Unity and is calling for Israel's destruction.

Amin, in an appearance Wednesday before the UN, called for the extinction of Israel as a state.

Israel, the ambassador said, is a democracy and "it is simply the fact that despotism will seek whatever opportunities come to hand to destroy that which threatens them most, which is democracy."

He said the U.S. is fighting a resolution now before the UN equating Zionism with racism and calling for the eradication of both.

Although Moynihan called this an outrage, he said it is likely to be passed by a majority of UN members. However, he said he hopes members of the Organization of African Unity "will disallow Amin and all he stands for."

Moynihan predicted that attacks against democratic governments will continue because "it is sensed in the world that democracy is in trouble."

Layoffs Mount In N.Y.

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — Thousands more New York City workers will be dismissed because of new budget demands expected next week from the emergency state financial agency, Gov. Hugh Carey said Friday.

Carey said the Emergency Financial Control Board is expected to demand that New York City cut this year's spending by at least $250 million.

"It will require thousands of layoffs, there is no way around that," Carey said.

Carey also said the board will give Mayor Abraham Beame a three-year period in which to balance the city's budget, which already has an $850-million deficit in the current fiscal year.

Beame has said the city has reduced a work force of 290,000 employees by 20,000 since January, including layoffs of 14,000 persons and attrition and retirement of 6,000 workers.

IWA Still Stuck Over Shingle Mill

Forest industry negotiations will reconvene in Victoria Monday after a weekend recess, with the three-year Huntting-Merritt shingle mill dispute believed to be still overshadowing other issues.

The International Woodworkers of America and Forest Industrial Relations, the companies' bargaining agent, have been meeting in Victoria in the latest round of talks for one week.

The dispute, which some participants expected to be settled within a week after the withdrawal of the two striking pulp unions, is drawing on because of staunch resistance from both sides to any change in positions on the Huntting-Merritt dispute.

The 180 lower mainland Huntting-Merritt workers went on strike three years ago to back demands for a shorter work week and an end to the piece-rate system of work.

During the past week the industry has again attempted to inject Huntington-Merritt as a contract issue, a position rejected by the IWA negotiators, who insist it must be settled on the local level.

The industry is expected to put a slightly modified position on the dispute before IWA leaders when the talks reconvene Monday afternoon, but the union appears to be holding firm in its position that Huntting-Merritt not be a contract issue at all.

Arbitrator Named For City Police

Vancouver engineer Guy Barclay will serve as arbitrator in the dispute between Victoria city police, city council and the police board.

All three parties agreed last week they would be bound by the recommendations of an arbitrator appointed by Labor Minister Bill King as a way of settling their latest contract negotiations.

Barclay, who was given an initial 14-day appointment, has acted as a chairman for several private arbitrations in recent years — most notably between Cominco and its employees and between B.C. Hydro and its workers.

He has held a number of senior management positions around B.C. and was formerly manager of industrial relations with B.C. Hydro.

The Victoria City Policemen's Union and the police board originally signed a letter of agreeement to end the labor dispute but the settlement was rejected by city council.

The decision by all three parties to accept binding arbitration averted a threatened strike by the police union.

More Shuffling to Come

The surprising thing about Premier Dave Barrett's cabinet shuffle on Friday is that, despite the big splash he made with the announcement, very little has changed. All the major portfolios — resources, health, attorney-general, labor — are untouched. One old minister out, one new face in — that's about the sum of things. Doubling up portfolios and shifting Mines Minister Leo Nimsick to the travel industry post (reportedly to ease him out in stages) are almost certainly just temporary.

Obviously, this shuffle is only the first stage of a two-part cabinet re-organization which won't be completed until sometime next year. Barrett is simply putting things in order for what is shaping up as a very tough re-election campaign. He has moved some of the strongest people in the government to hold together his weakest links.

An example is giving jurisdiction over the controversial Insurance Corporation of British Columbia to Provincial Secretary Ernie Hall, an able administrator who has acted as the premier's clean-up man in more than one political mess. Easing Transport Minister Robert Strachan out to pasture in London rids the cabinet of a man who always gave the impression of being out of his depth, and who got into more controversial scrapes than any other cabinet minister.

His replacement, Delta MLA Carl Linden, is a no-nonsense, hardnosed partisan who in his experience as a committee chairman in the legislature has ruffled feathers on both sides of the house but usually bulled things through to some sort of resolution.

Giving mines to Economic Development Minister Gary Lauk, a criminal lawyer who's proved to be a quick study in the field, seems to be a stopgap measure. If it isn't only temporary, it should be. With a copper smelter moving towards fruition, the mineral royalty changes promised previously, and the growing importance of coal development in B.C., the portfolio would seem to deserve a minister's undivided attention.

Giving finance to Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich, an accountant who gets the job just three years after he first expected it, is another good move, but he should also be freed of the agriculture portfolio as soon as possible. Managing the province's money and keeping farmers happy are not part-time jobs either.

From Barrett's point of view as party leader, there couldn't have been a better shuffle. With an election only months away, he can use the vacant cabinet positions as carrots to offer prospective NDP candidates (and to keep his thrice-passed-over backbenchers eager to please). Also, by doubling up, Barrett has made sure that nobody can accuse him of padding the cabinet with $48,000-a-year ministers in a time of recession and economic hardship.

In his second shuffle after the election — if he wins the election — Barrett might more confidently break with his cautious cabinet-making precedents and choose some individuals with talent — backbenchers like Rosemary Brown or Colin Gabelmann or Peter Rolston.

But that seems unlikely. For despite the radical labels pasted to Barrett by opponents, he seems to be a consummate conservative when it comes to practical politics — timid and cautious, almost.

Seat of the Pants Flying

In the manner of a retarded bulldog, Ottawa proceeded with plans to build a second super airport near Pickering, Ont. despite growing disenchantment with the idea on the part of the people it would serve. Both Liberals and New Democratic parties were opposed to the airport during the recent provincial election. Even Ontario's Conservatives, who had embraced the new airport in 1972, were losing enthusiasm. The Davis government's recent refusal to provide roads and services forced Ottawa to shelve the current plan.

What makes the situation of more than regional interest are the reasons why Ontarians became disillusioned with the concept. A similar project — Mirabel near Montreal — will cost double the original $214 million estimate. Since the airport will handle mainly international flights initially, overseas bound passengers must suffer costly transfer from existing Dorval — $5 by bus and up to $25 by cab. But what aroused Ontarians the most was the thought of hundreds of acres of prime farmland being paved over. In truth, the land bordering Lake Ontario is good, but it produces more race horses for gentlemen farmers than it does food crops. That may explain some of the objectors' heavy clout with Ontario politicians.

Besides these negative factors Canada faces a severe fossil fuel crisis within five years, according to government agencies. Should we build giant airports when jet fuel soon may be in short supply? The airlines have cut back their optimistic predictions on increased passenger traffic, even cutting fares to fill half empty flights on some domestic routes. Yet the government moved doggedly ahead on Mirabel and Pickering, acquiring $100 million in land at the latter site. There is also a good argument that Ottawa should shelve such grandiose projects at a time of low economic portents. If Pickering is out, Mirabel proceeds at high cost to the Canadian taxpayer.

Few people would question the logic of bigger and better airports in 1972. Certainly a case can be made for easing the congestion of overcrowded Canadian airports. But now? At what price? And what about other priorities? Are airports really that important? These are some questions which the government never appeared to consider. As usual, it seems to be flying by the seat of its pants, ignoring the weather reports.

EDITOR'S NOTEBOOK

Dress Rehearsal Rag's Political Counterpoints

Most of the loose ends in provincial politics were snipped off during the last 10 days.

The Liberal leadership changed hands after months of jockeying, quietly directed by manicured hands in velvet gloves. Three former Liberals mugged for the cameras and joined Social Credit, completing a political metamorphosis that began last May.

Everybody has slipped into the bunker of his choice. Everything remains as quiet as it ever gets on the western front.

The Socreds and NDP appear to be jostling each other at dead centre in attempts to create moderate auras.

On the hustings, Bill Bennett predicts the fight isn't going to be free enterprise versus socialism but individuals versus big government. If the Socred leader is tempted to lash the government on the province's bleak labor situation he resists it. Like an echo of his nemesis he will only say there are no easy solutions.

In Nanaimo, where a propane and beer dispute is causing much hardship, Social Credit is lending electric heaters to the populace — the only heat on the issue the party has given.

And then we come to Premier David Barrett. Wily huckster, sentimental politician, sincere human being. This complicated man is at the mid-point of a month-long provincial tour. If the dramatics of removing jacket and tie or trotting out retread speeches is passe in urban areas of sourthern Vancouver Island or the lower mainland, it is still good theatre on the hustings.

He pounds home all the neat things his government has done, invariably juxtaposing business reaction to the Marguerite purchase as opposed to that of Ocean Falls. Mincome, Pharmacare and the rest are dangled before audiences in the show and tell that is the premier's inimitable style.

Earlier, following a provincial energy commission report, Barrett increased the price paid to companies for new gas by 20 cents per 1,000 cubic feet. Even old gas on which the companies turned a comfortable profit at 10 cents MCF is subject to a 15 cent hike for corporations spending 20 cents on exploration. The NDP used to indignantly refer to such practices as "corporate welfare." Even tax-soaked property-owners have been promised succor in the spring budget.

All this is socialism?

Beneath the newly cultivated "responsible business" image the populist is still irrepressible. When the three Liberals joined Social Credit our humble premier commented: "The special downtown interests have been joined by the city-slicker lawyers."

As one-liners go, it couldn't be topped by William Jennings Bryan or W.A.C. himself.

But the jovial bunch who rolled into office in 1972 have lost their adolescent bounce. Laughter is shorter, the looks longer. Pragmatism has defused Utopian optimism.

Ruthless treasury board cuts to ministers' budgets have created internal resentment. Some programs have been curtailed. And now comes the painful cabinet shuffle.

Transportation czar Robert Strachan to London. Mines Minister Leo Nimsick to travel, the latter shift another signal to the grumbling mining industry. It's painful surgery for a government that operates more on heart than mind. But cerebral instincts must overcome visceral ones in the interest of a second term.

Who will get the applause when all the counterpoints have been resolved is anybody's guess.

Bennett must prove that Social Credit is more than a selfish alliance for power, a negative counterbalance in provincial politics. Barrett has to overcome an image as leader of a sloppy administration, too free with the people's money.

Interestingly enough, two private independent political polls taken in Victoria put the NDP far ahead of Social Credit, and traditionally this city is not fertile NDP territory. A B.C. Council of Forest Industries' survey is rumored to give Barrett a seven-point margin over Bennett.

A poll is not an election though. What we have seen now is, in Leonard Cohen's phrase, the dress rehearsal rag.

The sting has yet to come. — G.R.O.

RICHARD GWYN

Grits (Gasp!) Start Arguing

OTTAWA — Conservatives, as is well-known, delight in forming firing squads in circles, a compulsion that loses the party elections but which does give it an endearing, lively quality. Conservatives care what they stand for, or at any rate what they stand against — amongst each other.

Incredibly, the Liberals are starting to copy their opponents. Not to fire at each other in public yet, but to take aim at each other.

Even to hint at Liberal disunity is vaguely impertinent, and quite possibly is unconstitutional. The party has the discipline of a Macedonian phalanx. Yesterday a guaranteed income for the poor, today "peace and security" in the street. It can wheel left, wheel right to face the ideological threat of the moment without a single spear wavering.

That discipline is starting to crack. The other day, British Columbia Liberal MP Art Lee issued an angry demand for "economic leadership." Suddenly, the prospect is real that Prime Minister Trudeau's own leadership will be challenged at the party's convention in Ottawa, Nov. 7-9.

Maybe 25% Unhappy

Trudeau, naturally, won't lose. He may, however, be severely embarrassed. Aside from the policy debates which are the reason for the affair, delegates will be asked, as required by the party's constitution, to vote in secret on the question whether "a leadership convention should be held."

At the comparable conventions in 1970 and 1973, just 10 per cent of the delegates used this opportunity to express their restiveness. Party managers fear that the proportion of dissenters at the November meeting might jump to 20 or 25 per cent. Nay-saying to his leadership by one in five or one in four of his closest supporters so soon after an election triumph would amount to a stinging rebuke to Trudeau.

The causes of the Liberal malaise are both general and particular. By a series of individual decisions, as inexplicable as they have been left unexplained, Trudeau has offended one section after another of his own party:

- British Columbia Liberals, who have already protested Trudeau's appointment of his own former principal aide, Jack Austin, to the senate.
- Alberta Liberals, who are enraged at Trudeau's appointment of a non-MP, ex-Canadian Radio-Television Commission chairman Pierre Juneau, to the cabinet. Last year, one of their own, ex-MP and Edmonton businessman Hu Harries, was asked by Trudeau to run in a byelection. Harries agreed, provided he was first made a minister. Back came the reply that "as a matter of principle," Trudeau did not name non-MPs to his cabinet. (Judy LaMarsh earlier learned in the same way that Quebec is not a province like the others.)

PIERRE TRUDEAU
. . . facing disgruntled membership

- Saskatchewan Liberals who are furious at Trudeau's appointment to the cabinet of an unknown Quebecker, Marcel Lessard, in preference to the highly regarded Saskatchewan MP Cliff McIsaac.
- Ottawa-area Liberals, who are both dismayed by the civil service backlash against bilingualism and demoralized by the sudden loss of their own minister, former Finance Minister John Turner.

In normal times, grievances like these could be smoothed over by the usual distribution of rewards and punishments, but the times are abnormal. Liberal rank-and-file, as much as ordinary citizens, share in the general belief that the government no longer controls the economy.

Trudeau is well aware of the threat. The agenda for the recent cabinet meeting at Meach Lake was to examine the long-term priority studies that are Trudeau's private passion and on which his aides have labored for a year. The documents never were discussed, nor even, by some ministers, read beforehand. "We came down," one told me, "to economic and political reality."

Schism Coming?

The best evidence of the gathering concern about the November convention is that work has already started on the speech Trudeau will give. The first draft was completed last week, the longest lead-time for any of his speeches in anyone's memory.

These are the reflex responses that always have worked in the past. The reply that will matter will be Trudeau's new economic policies. The pressure now is on for the package to be announced before the November meeting.

If Trudeau ducks his moment of economic truth, then all the mini-rebellions he has set off in his own ranks may combine into an event almost unknown in Canadian political history — a Liberal schism large enough, not to unseat a leader but to deal a devastating blow to his authority. Don't count on it, of course, but don't count it out either. Some of those spears are wavering, in anger.

Negative Blessing

This morning (Oct. 2) as I listened to Good Morning Radio on the CBC, my psyche was assaulted by a philistine, one Dr. Juanita Chambers, a psychologist, from Edmonton. I do not have a Ph.D., but I do have the perspicacity to recognize the printed word as a reservoir of knowledge accumulated since the dawn of recorded history. Dr. Chambers seems to ignore that incontrovertible fact as she cites the genres of only contemporary literature.

Dr. Chambers seems to be quite nonchalant that our society should be consigned to the barbarism of commercial television as our primary medium of communication and even education. She says, in effect: "Don't worry if Johnny can't read or write as he may be expressing himself in other ways." He is doing just that and we are confronting more anti-social behavior than the world has ever seen! In this age of more and more leisure time, it seems to me that the promulgation of the idea that the reading of quality literature is a pleasure and that learning for its own sake is a great joy, would be both beneficial and practical as well as logical.

Corporate business is at this very moment reaping the sad harvest of such thinking, or lack of it, as that of Dr. Chambers. It is finding that young executives are having great difficulty or are unable to express innovative ideas in expository writing. Now that the pocketbooks of those with clout are being affected, there is some chance of the pendulum swinging the other way.

In the meantime, Dr. Chambers is establishing a name for herself. I and many others had not heard of her before this morning. Perhaps she and her ilk serve as a negative blessing if she causes us to arrest the retreat of civilization to the cave! — Sydney Carroll, 4657 Amblewood Drive.

The Old 'New Deal'

Premier Barrett has told America: "The U.S. would not be in its present condition if its leaders had built in the way advocated by Franklin Roosevelt." Canadians hope Ottawa got the message.

Since 1921, Roosevelt was afflicted with crippling poliomyelitis. His courage led him to launch a $4 billion public works program, followed up with old-age pensions, jobless benefits, and future resources-usage legislation.

The banking tycoons balked. Roosevelt closed their banks for one day. He told the bankers to take an aspirin, then get on with the job of curing the nation's economic headache.

FRANKLIN ROOSEVELT
. . . got on with the job

The president whacked the U.S. dollar down to 59 cents to align its value to true gold reserves. He took full responsibility for the vast expenditures. From his wheelchair he lifted a nation to its feet.

He preferred a muscled work force to welfared, putty-soft idleness. To the opposition's weak and asinine barbs, Roosevelt quoted Plato: "My aim is not the disproportionate happiness of one favored class, but the greatest happiness of the whole."

His compassion for all things living glowed when personally attacked: "Call me what you will, but dare not insult my dog, Fala."

Are you awake, Ottawa? — Ernie R. Smith, 3968 Bear Street.

Animals' Plight

We who are workers for animal liberation think a step in the right direction would be the setting aside of Sunday, Oct. 5 as a day for world prayer for animals, as is officially observed in England. Oct. 4 is St. Francis' birthday, but Oct. 5 is the closest Sunday. For those who are interested in the plight of animals, would you please get in touch with your minister or house of worship and suggest next Sunday as a good day for prayers and sermons about animals in churches and Sunday schools. — Nellie McClung, Vancouver.

Keen Liberals

I feel truly sorry for all the reporters and their readers who got taken in by their remarks, who prophesied the imminent demise of the Liberal party. Sorry, just t'aint so.

If you had been at the recent Liberal Convention in Vancouver you would have seen, as I did, nearly 500 keen delegates representing hundreds of other Liberal members all across this province. The sessions were well run, the policies (labor, housing, transportation, education, etc.) were well thought out, David Anderson was cheered for all the good work he has put in as one of the few effective opposition MLAs in the legislature, his successor, brilliant and energetic Gordon Gibson, is now set to lead the party in the coming election year.

I wonder where the convention reporters were when all this was taking place? In the hotel bar? — Mona Morley, 430 Dallas Road.

Mr. Lougheed Goes to London . . . the Joys of Power and Oil

By CHRISTINA NEWMAN
The Globe and Mail

LONDON — Notes from a diary on the Lougheed mission to Europe:

If you linger long enough in the company of Albertans (and in most situations they persist in calling themselves Albertans rather than Canadians) their style becomes infectious and you catch yourself, if not exactly swaggering down Park Lane, at least walking it with more confident strides than is your normal custom.

That's what the Alberta style consists of these days — complete confidence — and it couldn't be more remote from the old self-disparaging, neo-colonial, don't-mind-us-we're-just-out-of-the-bush diffidence that used to be displayed by Canadians abroad.

This confidence was readily apparent Tuesday when Peter Lougheed gave the first formal speech of his 14-day European tour at the Royal Institute of International Affairs at Chatham House in St. James Square.

It wasn't so much that he made statements that were brilliant or newsworthy or stunningly original. It was a forthright short talk about Canada's position in the world community and Alberta's importance in Canada in terms of its energy resources. But the way it was delivered and the way it was received seemed very important indeed.

Grey hairs

Lougheed was looking good, feeling relaxed and he projected what he called "the new spirit of . . . the new West." What he said, in effect, was that he is the premier of a province rich in resources, living in a country and a world that's hungry for those resources, that after a long hard fight he had convinced Ottawa of Alberta's importance in Canada's economic, social and political fabric and that a good many of the grey hairs seen on his head at the moment came about as a result of that fight.

Now he has come to Europe to convince the British and other members of the EEC that Alberta is no mere frontier province full of rubes ripe for a ripoff but that "one of the objectives of this mission is to create a greater awareness of Western Canada as a more significant element in our nation's foreign policy consideration." He went further in his concluding remark, saying with statesmanlike calm that Canada would endeavour "to maintain its reputation as a responsible partner in the world community" and implying by everything he had said before that Alberta had a big role to play in the policies of that "responsible partner."

Polite nods

The audience which consisted of a well-dressed crowd who appeared to belong to the middle class intelligentia — the sort of people, said a Canada House spokesman, who belong to the Canadian Institute of International Affairs — received all of this with polite nods of approval as though Mr. Lougheed were indeed a blue-eyed Arab with a sincere tie and a Harvard degree and the questions they put to him afterwards were intelligent and respectful. Lougheed gave answers which Lord Limerick, who was the chairman, described as "masterful" and they certainly were adroit.

"Was he worried that the Foreign Investment Review Agency would adversely affect foreign investment needed in Alberta to exploit its resources?" Not at all, said the premier, with a firmness that would chill any nationalist's heart; We've always welcomed foreign investment and we always will. All we ask is that it be in the best interests of Canada. The only thing investors need to fear is red tape and everybody knows Albertans hate red tape.

"What about the United States — could he foresee some kind of continental oil policy?" Now this is a very touchy question, said the premier, with some complicated matters involved and nothing roused Canadians more than the idea of any sort of continental policy. But all the same, he thought things could be worked out and Alberta's short-term oil commitments and long-term natural gas commitments to the U.S. would be met and the federal government now was coming to the understanding that some kind of "swap" might be necessary in future to extend these commitments.

LOUGHEED . . . playing down the rube image

"What about his federal ambitions?" Well, and this was said with engaging laughter, he hoped he would escape this question so many miles from home, but the truth was that he had been elected on the promise that he would guide Alberta through the difficulties of the '70s and in many ways he found the challenge of Alberta far more exciting than the challenge of Ottawa ever could be.

In command

This is the way the answers went, smoothly, smoothly, and there was no doubt they were the responses of a man very much in command of himself and very certain of what he wanted to project.

The contrast between the Lougheed self-esteem and the old Canadian manner of dealing with the British is hard to describe to anybody who didn't live through the tail end of the Pearson-Heeney-Robertson era in the '60s when the Canadians who represented us abroad were very different men, engaging in their manner, civilized beyond compare and totally removed in style from the country that produced them.

They were really mid-Atlantic men, educated at Oxbridge, but deeply aware in the back of their minds that they came from the farms and small towns of Ontario and Nova Scotia and that this shame had to be hidden at all costs, lest the British look down their long noses or honk with laughter into their hankerchiefs. Such men, or younger paler imitations of them, still exist in external affairs, as was evident in the briefing given to the press travelling with Lougheed at Canada House by one of the middle-ranking counsellors there.

This chap (and he did say "chap" several times) was brilliantly well informed about the complex state of British politics, but he spoke in accents that were more redolent of Whitehall than of Moose Jaw and the boredom of having to contend with journalists who kept asking questions about North Sea oil caused his face to contort with polite pain. In the end, he had to send for a resident oil expert who actually was British and, with some relief, he gathered up his briefcase and his umbrella and rushed off to catch a train to Blackpool so he could immerse himself in Mr. Wilson's efforts to consolidate his fractious Labour Party.

Played against this old-style external internationalism, the unaffected chauvinism of the Albertans seems not parochial but somehow heartening. Their chauvinism shows itself in small endearing ways. Mr. Trudeau (and Mr. Pearson before him) generally stays at Claridge's or the Savoy when in London, leaving his declasse staff and the press to the lesser delights of sniff Americanized hotels such as the Hilton or the Londonderry.

Tastes like lox

But the Lougheed party is staying at the Canadian-owned Inn on the Park. Everybody from secretaries to deputy ministers to cameramen has equal (i.e. very expensive) accommodation and (strangely enough, to somebody who likes the shabby gentility of the so-called "real" English hotels such as Browns or the Stafford) the place has its charms. For one thing, it's warm; you can run from your bed to the bathroom in the mornings without raising cold bumps the size of Plover's eggs on your legs. The coffee is hot and tastes like coffee, not old brewed-up bits of saddle soap strained through cheesecloth, and the switchboard actually connects.

Still, the doorman stands around gossiping instead of hailing taxis, you have to do without the comfort of heated towel racks and if you want tea and smoked salmon sandwiches at 4, you get a thinbrew presumably made from tea bags served without a silver strainer and the smoked salmon comes with cream cheese and tastes suspiciously like lox. Ah well, the real London lies out there still, one gathers. There's a Pinter play on the boards with Sir Ralph Richardson in the cast; they must be sprinkling everything with watercress in the fountain at Fortnums and pressing orange squashes in the food halls at Harrods and staggering up the staircases with sole almandine at the Wheelers' in Duke of York Street. It's just that there's no chance to sample these delights. The Albertans are running from information briefing to information briefing from morning to night, and it would seem churlish or at least decadently eastern Canadian not try to run with them.

Fine moment

For most of the Albertans, the day and their London sojourn ended with a reception given by Lord Balogh, the minister of state for energy, at Lancaster House, which was built for the second son of George III and is now a centre for British government entertaining. It was a fine moment for the Albertans. There stood the premier of their province, one-thirty-second American Indian in his ancestry, amid the gilt and marble and Italiante ceilings, in a reception line with a peer of the realm. That the peer was a Hungarian, an economist, an intellectual and a socialist mattered not one whit. He had the proper hauteur. Looking over the scene, one of Lougheed's old friends from the days when he played with the West End Tornadoes said admiringly, "Boy these Brits really know how to do things. In Calgary we're trying to preserve log cabins and here the flunkies keep thanking you for the privilege af bringing you a Scotch and soda in a house that belonged to a king."

There's a Lot to Be Humble About

THE SUN
An Editorial

Premier Barrett came off the free lunch circuit to present his government's mid-year economic review to the "gloom and doom boys."

And did he show them!

He unveiled a vast "revenue surplus on budgetary account" — $94.6 million.

He pronounced himself "humbly proud."

Perhaps he did not read the economic review, which tells us what happened in the fiscal year that ended six months ago, a year of modest vintage that — given the way things are going this year — might improve somewhat with age.

Humble he should be. Proud? He's got to be kidding.

We can see that he might be proud of his ability to confuse the books as well as a hardware merchant, or a hardware merchant's son, any old day. But we did expect something better of Mr. Barrett — that's why we got rid of the hardware merchant.

In any case, whatever a "revenue surplus on budgetary account" is — Mr. Barrett did not use such words last year — the government spent more than it earned.

To be precise, it spent $13,547,427 more than it earned.

If the premier doubts this, perhaps he would be so kind as to turn to his economic review, page eight, and look at the number on the bottom line. This number is government revenue. Then if he would look at the number on the bottom of page 10. This is government expenditure. Subtract the first number from the second. He will find he has spent $13,547,427 more than he earned.

Or if he finds this arduous, perhaps he would turn to page 14. There, he will find something called the "provincial budgetary cash reserve" — the government's mattress. On March 1, 1973, it was filled with $157 million worth of the taxpayer's previous generosity.

BARRETT . . . budgets and mirrors

The mattress is down by $13,547,427. This is not a deficit, however. It is "a drawdown from the budgetary cash reserve."

At least it was down that much six months ago. For all we know, the mattress might be empty now and this may account for Premier Barrett's giving up the finance portfolio — "perhaps the usefulness is outdone at this point," as he put it. Who wants to flog an empty mattress?

In any case, back to that "revenue surplus on budgetary account" described in the mid-year review and associated press releases.

It comes about because expenditures were divided into "budgetary" and "non-budgetary" categories. In the last review there was no such division.

The non-budgetary category in the latest review totals $108 million which, budget or non-budget, was spent by the government. The non-budgetary expenditures include money spent on "special employment programs," ferry construction, park development and recreation facilities.

This, as we recall, is different from what he promised in his budget last February when he said "our budgetary plans include: job creation and expansion through special employment programs and hospital, housing, schools, and community and recreation construction programs.

Suddenly what he said would be budgetary is non-budgetary. Puzzling.

But even at that, getting the non-budgetary category up to $108 million involved some fancy pencil work.

For example, in the last mid-year review there was a little item called "investment in and advances to Crown corporations." It totalled $69.6 million and, when the government added everything up for 1973 and got a surplus, it was counted as expenditure.

But when the government added up the figures for 1974, the same item — now totalling $26.7 million — had been declared non-budgetary and wasn't counted.

Mr. Barrett showed the gloom and doom boys all right. With mirrors — from Bennett's hardware.

Nothing Like Budgie To Shake Family Up

Time around the Hosford household has recently come to be measured in terms of B.B. and A.B. — Before Budgies and After Budgies.

You see, there's been an addition to our family — two additions to be exact — a pair of budgerigars.

The rationale — as always — for this rather impetuous entry into the world of household pets was first to introduce our boy to the joys of knowing living things intimately and secondly, of course, to make him aware of the responsibilities of caring for such animals.

Well, it hasn't quite worked out the way we expected. First, all three of us, not just the boy, have been infected with the cheerful exuberance of those little Australian aborigines. And second, Mom has assumed at least part — and from where I stand, a growing part — of the care and feeding of said aborigines.

Not only has the coming of the budgies brought changes in the daily routine of Hosfordia, but it has created tremendous strains on a power structure carefully established over many years of relative connubial bliss. Where once I stood alone as the birdwatcher of the clan, now this exalted position is under attack from two sides.

On the one hand there is my wife and the boy, both suddenly smitten by a rather restricted version of the bird-watching syndrom — budgerigar watching.

On the other are the budgies themselves. While we're watching them, they're watching the birds outside. As a matter of fact, from a purely wild-birdwatching point of view, those two budgies are the best thing to come along since binoculars and field guides.

Before Budgerigars, a lot of avian activity went on outside our house without me being aware of it. Despite my deep interest in birds, household chores — such as football games — were continually interfering with my watch on the birds.

And comment, from a Budgerigar, can be reduced to a series of high-pitched, and seemingly indignant, shrieks subtly designed to draw even the most inveterate television aficionado away from his tube.

Not only do those budgies tell me when something avian is going on outside — either at the bird feeder, in the garden, or in the air over the garden — but I'm beginning to detect a pattern to their patter, enough to know that they have a different presentation for differing situations.

For example, Band-tailed Pigeons seem to draw the greatest interest from the budgies. When the budgies first arrived, about a month ago, the Band-tails were usually seen flying high and fast on whatever errands were of immediate import to them. But lately, as the acorns ripened, the Band-tails have been coming in to feed, setting off a wildly cheering pair of Budgerigars with a sound fit to drown-out a full house at Empire Stadium.

Starlings, too, get the budgies worked up but only when flying over in large, dense flocks. I get the feeling that some "instinct" deep in the budgies' subconscious is reminding them that this is what it was like before domestication. At any rate, the budgies cock their little heads, eye the rapidly departing starlings, and bleat a plaintive farewell.

For a hawk the budgies have a special kind of treatment. Safe in the farthest corner of their cage they perform a kind of nervous two-step, or hot-foot, to the tune of apprehensive mutterings — and this from birds that never saw a hawk before last month.

And thanks to those budgies, I've got a new bird for Colwood, at least one I hadn't seen there before. Checking a particularly agitated version of the budgies' "there-go-the-starlings" routine, I was just in time to see a sleek, fast-flying bird disappear over the trees across the street — a Mourning Dove.

So, I guess I'll have to open a new chapter in my bird note-book—an A.B. chapter.

Special Rates at Credit Union For Depositors Aged 55 and Up

By AL FORREST
Times Business Editor

West Coast Savings Credit Union today began a program of offering special interest rates to Victorians 55 and over to help protect them against the ravages of inflation.

The program includes an extra 7.5 per cent interest on chequing accounts plus a cost-of-living bonus.

It is patterned after a pioneer project by the Bank of British Columbia which offers special rates to those 65 and over but the West Coast Savings Credit Union plan is unique in Canada in offering special rates down to the age of 55.

"We feel something should be done to protect those on fixed incomes from the effects of inflation," said Rodger Lutz, general manager of West Coast Savings.

"People are retiring younger every year and so we decided to offer this program to anyone 55 and up."

Regular customers of West Coast Savings receive no interest on chequing accounts and 6.375 per cent on straight savings. Those who show evidence they are 55 or older will receive 7.5 per cent on their deposits in their chequing accounts and have no charge for writing cheques.

In addition, they will receive a cost-of-living bonus paid and compounded monthly. With the present rate of inflation being just under 12 per cent, the effective interest rate is raised by 12 per cent of 7.5 per cent or .92 per cent, for an effective rate of 8.42 per cent.

Regular customers receive 9.5 per cent interest for one-year term savings. Those 55 and over will receive 9.75 per cent.

A number of free services are also available for those in the 55 and up age group.

The program is similar to that begun about one year ago here by the Bank of B.C. The bank plan applies only to those 65 and up.

H. J. Steele, manager of the Fort Street branch of the Bank of B.C., said his company offers those 65 and up 7.25 per cent on their chequing accounts while the regular rate is 3 per cent. The 7.25 per cent is the rate normally paid only to those customers on a true savings program.

In addition, the Bank of B.C. pays a cost of living adjustment every January.

Steele said that if an investor 65 or older has earned $10 in interest during the year — and the cost of living in January is judged by Statistics Canada to have gone up 12 per cent — then an additional $12 (12 per cent of $100) will be paid to the investor.

The West Coast Savings special interest rate will also be revised in January when the cost-of-living figure is announced.

Both plans offer the right to take money orders, travellers cheques and similar instruments with no commission charges.

West Coast Savings is subsidizing its program in part through revenues received from the sale of lottery tickets at its five offices in this area. It is a Victoria-based company.

U.K. Firm Studying Quebec Iron Venture

LONDON (CP) — British Steel Corp. said it is continuing talks with the Quebec government on possible participation in a planned iron processing plant at Port Cartier, Que.

A corporation spokesman said the company had been approached by Quebec authorities about potential participation, as had other firms, and "discussions are still in progress."

The spokesman denied a Toronto report that the corporation has already agreed to join the Quebec government's steel company, Sidbec, in a $500 million joint venture to produce iron pellets at Port Cartier.

British Steel is a major importer of Quebec iron for its plants in Britain.

The spokesman also denied reports circulating in Canada that government-owned British Steel is planning to dispose of its exisiting investments in Canada.

The corporation's Canadian investments "had been deliberately expanded . . . on the basis of a long-term commitment to growth in Canada."

He noted that British Steel's chairman, Sir Monty Finniston, told a Toronto audience last March that "we are investing in Canada because we are excited by the possibilities for growth in this country . . . we hope to share in this growth."

In Montreal, a spokesman for British Steel said it will be a partner, taking a 40-per-cent interest in the Quebec project but Michael Pelletier, assistant to Sidbec's president, denied that a firm agreement has been reached. He said negotiations are continuing.

Huge Tax Fraud Found in Belgium

LIEGE, Belgium (Reuter) — The Belgian finance ministry has uncovered a huge tax fraud involving 100 companies and a sum totalling about $75 million, police said.

The police said the finance ministry may recover up to a third of the money.

Reorganization Bid By Bricklin in U.S.

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — The manufacturer of the Bricklin sports car has filed for reorganization under U.S. federal bankruptcy laws.

The action was filed Tuesday in U.S. District Court by General Vehicle Inc.

"The move will allow for the company to meet its obligation in an orderly fashion," said Malcolm Bricklin, chairman of the board and founder of the Scottsdale-based company.

Bricklin anticipated that the move will protect General Vehicle's assets and preserve both the dealer network and consumer warrranties. However, he acknowledged that the firm still may go out of business despite the reorganization effort.

Bricklin Canada Ltd., manufacturers of the Bricklin, was placed into receivership in Saint John, N.B., last Friday following a breakdown in discussions between the province of New Brunswick and the First Pennsylvania Bank, General Vehicle's principal lenders, said Bricklin.

Assets of Bricklin Canada Ltd. were taken over Monday by Canada Permanent Trust on behalf of First Pennsylvania Bank.

The Bricklin, a gull-winged, plastic-bodied two-seater, was introduced in mid-1974. The company has two manufacturing plants in New Brunswick.

The government of New Brunswick forced Bricklin Canada into receivership after the firm allegedly defaulted on a $7-million payment Thursday.

BEWARE OF THE YOUNG

In the early part of 1966, the Czechoslovakian Chess Federation invited the USSR Chess Federation to send a representative to a tournament in Prague. The Soviet Federation, believing it to be a Junior tournament, sent its Junior Champion, 15-year-old Anatoly Karpov. But when Anatoly arrived, it turned out NO Junior tournament had been planned at all. Instead, it was an international affair for all ages. Serious consideration was given to sending the boy home but after much debate the organizers permitted Karpov to participate. So what happened? You guessed it! The 15-year-old Anatoly won first prize!

A RECORD TOURNAMENT

The Third Annual World Open Chess Tournament in New York, played in early July, set a new record for the largest turnout of participants in an Open Chess Tournament in the United States. There were 815 entries! The prize fund was also the highest ever in this kind fo competitive chess, $20,000.

The big surprise of the event was 19-year-old Alan Trefler of Brookline, Mass., a student at Dartmouth. Ranked 115th before the tournament with a rating of only 2045, he started with a loss in the first round, then won the next eight in a row and boosted his rating to 2300. He also won a $2,250 chunk of the prize fund.

Grandmaster Pal Benko, recovering from a disastrous showing in the recent U.S. championship, also scored 8-1, won the same amount and took the title on a tiebreak.

Grandmaster Nicolas Rossolimo of New York made a tremendous comeback, coming in third with 7½ points. Grandmaster Walter Browne, U.S. Champion, came in 4-13 with 7 points.

Civilian Rule By 1979, Nigeria's Aim

LAGOS (Reuter) — Nigeria's new head of state, Brig. Murtala Muhammad, says the country will be returned to civilian rule by October, 1979, at the latest.

The brigadier, who took power two months ago in a bloodless coup that ousted Gen. Yakubu Gowon, was speaking in a country-wide broadcast on Nigeria's 15th independence anniversary.

He outlined a five-stage program for a return to democratic government, the first stage including drafting of a new national constitution. The constitution drafting committee will start work this month, he said.

Gowon, now in exile, in 1972 promised to restore civilian rule after four years, but he reneged on this pledge a year ago, saying the 1976 target had become unrealistic.

The four-year delay, announced by Muhammad in only his second broadcast speech since the July 29 coup, was expected to disappoint many Nigerians who have been living under the military since 1966.

SLA Memoir Clue to Patty's Story

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The memoir of a kidnapper, found by federal investigators Friday in the last hideout of Synbionese Liberation Army (SLA) members Bill and Emily Harris, may tell the inside story of the Feb. 4, 1974 kidnapping of Patty Hearst.

"My life really changed a year ago. On Feb. 4, I proved to myself and we all proved to each other that we were guerrillas," begins the 56-page typed manuscript. Officials say they are not sure who wrote it.

The FBI indicated, however, that the document is only one of several original literary efforts left behind by captured SLA members.

There was no indication of whether Miss Hearst might be the author of any of the manuscripts.

The new material was released hours after the Harrises won postponement of their arraignment in Los Angeles on assault and kidnapping charges.

Mrs. Harris, indicating she will defend her political beliefs in court, asked for a court-appointed lawyer who will let her speak out.

In San Francisco, Miss Hearst's lawyer revealed that the jailed heiress did not personally author a sworn affidavit in which she says she was brainwashed and tortured by the SLA.

Terence Hallinan said a mystery witness gave him the first inside details of Miss Hearst's months in captivity. He said Miss Hearst later confirmed them and made additions.

Confronted with the details, the 21-year-old Miss Hearst seemed to be transformed, he said.

"She broke down and changed right in front of my eyes," he said. "Up to that point she was unable to relate to anyone and she was just reciting rhetoric all time."

Hallinan said his source on Miss Hearst's life underground was a woman who knew her at a Pennsylvania farmhouse where she and the Harrises hid out during the summer and early fall of 1974.

Sports activist Jack Scott and his wife, Micki, have been under investigation for harboring Miss Hearst at the farmhouse.

Hallinan said his source described Miss Hearst as "catatonic" and "only obeying orders everyone else gave her during the time she was there."

The sworn affidavit saying Miss Hearst never willingly joined the SLA was presented to U.S. District Court Judge Oliver J. Carter in an effort to win Miss Hearst's release on bail. She faces trial on federal bank robbery charges here and in Los Angles on assault and kidnapping charges.

Psychiatrists are scheduled to report Tuesday whether Miss Hearst is mentally fit to undergo cross-examination on the affidavit.

The new FBI inventory adds evidence that Miss Hearst and the Harrises moved from Pennsylvania to Sacramento in October, 1974, for an extended stay.

Authorities are checking apparent links between the trio and two bank robberies in that area—one involving a murder. No charges have been filed.

3 New Tories In Race?

OTTAWA — The race for the national Progressive Conservative leadership will gather momentum next week when at least three new candidates are expected to enter the contest — and within the next month or so there might be six others.

At least nine members of the 95-member Conservative caucus are known to have expressed interest in succeeding Robert Stanfield. Whether all take the plunge remains to be seen.

But announcements are expected this week from Flora MacDonald (Kingston and The Islands), Patrick Nowlan (Annapolis Valley) and John Fraser (Vancouver South). They follow Heward Grafftey (Brome-Missisquoi), who was fast off the mark early last summer with his official announcement.

Other likely contenders are James Gillies (Don Valley), Joe Clark (Rocky Mountain) and Jack Horner (Crowfoot), not to mention Claude Wagner (St. Hyacinthe). Wagner, former Quebec Liberal justice minister who became Conservative external affairs critic in 1972, has been saying little, but is regarded as an almost certain entry.

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Navy has softened the punishment meted out to Cmdr. Connelly D. Stevenson, who allowed a topless dancer to perform on the deck of his nuclear submarine as it sailed out of Port Canaveral, Fla., July 10.

Admiral J. L. Holloway III, Chief of Naval Operations, ruled Thursday that Stevenson should get a letter of admonition instead of the more serious letter of reprimand subordinates had recommended, and that he should not have to forfeit half a month's pay.

While Holloway's decisions do not prohibit Stevenson from being promoted and taking command of another ship, navy officers said the actions are still expected to make it difficult.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. — An Ocala, Fla., man who told of a four-man conspiracy to kill President Ford and Senator Edward Kennedy (Dem. Mass.) was charged Friday with lying to the FBI.

U.S. Magistrate Harvey Schlesinger, acting on a motion by government prosecutors, dismissed charges of conspiracy to assassinate against John Clayton Massey, 32.

★ ★ ★

PALM SPRINGS, Calif. — No charges will be brought against William Plachta, who stood by while his wife committed suicide, by taking sleeping pills, Riverside County District Attorney Byron Morton said Friday.

Morton said Plachta had acted out of "love and compassion" for his terminally ill wife, but warned the case should not be misleading. Helping another person commit suicide is still against the law, he said.

LONDON — Edward Heath, former British prime minister, says Chairman Mao Tse-tung's grasp of world affairs impressed him when he met the 81-year-old Chinese leader in Peking last month.

Heath says Mao made the same impact on him as "three great European leaders" — West Germany's Konrad Adenauer, Britain's Sir Winston Churchill and France's Gen. Charles de Gaulle.

FIVE-YEAR PEACE TREATY FOR NHL

TORONTO (CP) — The Star says National Hockey League owners and players will sign an extraordinary peace treaty at a news conference in New York on Monday.

In a report from New York, The Star said today that the agreement covers five years.

The newspaper says the league has labelled the contract as "an agreement of historical significance in professional sport" and includes such matters as an eventual world series of hockey with the Soviet Union and increases in player benefits in the NHL pension plan.

William Wirtz, president of Chicago Black Hawks, sparked the treaty negotiations with Alan Eagleson, executive director of the NHL Players' Association, The Star said.

"Wirtz led all the discussions," an NHL governor was quoted as saying. "Eagleson, speaking for the players, was just fine."

The pact, the newspaper said, includes the following:

—A five-year collective bargaining agreement between owners and players.

Philly Dates Always Sad For Sabres

By The Canadian Press

Buffalo Sabres might be excused for simply mailing the points to the Spectrum the next time they're scheduled to visit Philadelphia Flyers.

Putting in an appearance at Philadelphia seems to be little more than a formality for the Sabres, who haven't won in the Pennsylvania city since they joined the National Hockey League for the 1970-71 season.

They extended their winless string to 20 games Friday night when they dropped a 4-1 decision to the Flyers in an NHL exhibition game. On two occasions, they pulled themselves together and managed a tie.

In Friday's other NHL exhibitions, New York Rangers defeated Providence Reds of the American Hockey League 7-3, Vancouver Canucks downed Los Angeles Kings 6-3, Atlanta Flames whipped St. Louis Blue 7-2, Boston Bruins defeated Montreal Canadiens 4-2, California Seals dropped Salt Lake Golden Eagles of the Central Hockey League 5-1.

In World Hockey Association exhibition games, Cleveland Crusaders defeated Quebec Nordiques 7-5 and Phoenix Roadrunners topped Denver Spurs 5-3.

Power-play goals in the first period by Bill Barber and Ross Lonsberry gave the Flyers a 2-0 lead. Bob Sirois and Don Saleski added second-period goals for Philadelphia before Buffalo's Don Luce spoiled Wayne Stephenson's shutout bid.

John Gould secored two goals and assisted on a third by Ron Sedlbauer for the Canucks. Paulin Bordeleau, Ab Demarco and Dennis Ververgaert were the other Vancouver scorers. Los Angeles got goals from Gene Carr, Butch Goring and Bob Murdoch.

Bobby Schmautz and Dave Forbes got the other Boston goals. Jacques Lemaire and Murray Wilson were the other Montreal scorers.

IT'S A BIG SAVE as Vancouver goalie Ken Lockett uses both gloves to hold puck after stopping shot by Marcel Dionne of Los Angeles Kings in exhibition hockey game Friday at Vancouver. Jostling for position in front of net Mike Murphy (7) of Kings and Tracy Pratt of Canucks, who skated to 6-3 victory. (CP Wirephoto)

Runners, Spectrum Battle to Deadlock

Both teams kept alive their unbeaten streaks as Reynolds Roadrunners and Spectrum played to a 3-3 deadlock before approximately 500 fans in a key Greater Victoria High School Soccer League clash Friday night at Royal Athletic Park.

The two powerhouses, who lead their respective divisions and are favored to repeat as playoff finalists, met in driving rain, mud and high winds for the first and last time in the regular schedule.

Doug Wellbourne, back with the Roadrunners, after trying out with an English League third division side this summer, put Reynolds ahead 1-0 early in the match but Dan Hood, last season's scoring leader, tied it up for Spectrum before half time.

Wellbourne came through again with a spectacular header in the second half but Hood countered again and converted-goalkeeper Julius Karpati managed to put Spectrum ahead 3-2 at little later.

Then, with about 10 minutes left in the match, Ross Barnett of Reynolds gained a free-kick opportunity deep within his own territory. He booted the ball far up-field to set up striker Keith Thompson, who made no mistake and beat Gordie Reading with a low shot into the left side of the net to create the deadlock.

In other matches Friday, Mt. Douglas blanked Parkland 2-0, Claremont edged Esquimalt 4-3 and Oak Bay blanked St. Michael's, 8-0.

Art Hobbs and Rex Craig connected for Mt. Douglas.

Colin Knight scored twice late in the game to give Claremont the victory while single tallies were added by Dixon Eng and Steve Grant. Murray Allen, Pat Duncan and Mike Bell replied for Esquimalt.

Eight individual marksmen provided Oak Bay with a well-balanced attack. Pete Zachary, Charlie Fisher, Scott McDonald, Dave Richmond, Mike Miller, Mike Farrell, Bill Haafe and Ken Martin took care of the scoring that pushed Oak Bay solidly into second place in Division II, two points behind Spectrum.

Cats Lift Lid Tonight

Victoria Cougar coach Pat Ginnell made some minor line changes Friday and considers his team set and ready for its Western Canada Hockey League opener tonight.

The lid comes off Victoria's 1975-6 season at 8:30 when the Cougars face off with Calgary Centennials at Memorial Arena.

Ginnell's late shuffle was made necessary in order to fit in winger Rick Martin, who returned to Victoria late Thursday after a tryout with the professional Denver Spurs.

Ginnell placed Martin on a line with Dan Lucas and Al Hill. Curt Fraser, who had been playing with Hill and Lucas, shifted to another unit with Jim Gustafson and Jeff McDill.

That gives Cougars two experienced lines. The rugged McDill was obtained in a preseason trade with Flin Flon Bombers while the other five are holdovers.

Victoria's third line will be formed by rookies Kim Hilkewich, Alvin Moore and Greg Anderson, while Rick Durston and Dennnis Fenske will dress as extras and penalty-killers.

Holdovers Tim Williams, Lorry Gloeckner and Rick Peter will be joined on defence by Ken Beuckert, Don Johnson and, possibly, Greg Tebbut.

Grant Shmyr, a 17-year-old, six-foot-three defenceman recently acquired by Ginnell from Burnaby, isn't expected to start.

Ginnell said he will decide on his starting goaltender just before game time. The choice is between Gerry Simpson and Dan Rogers, who both played for the Cougars in the past but spent most of last season with Nanaimo Clipper in the B.C. Junior League.

Meanwhile, Centennials dropped an 8-5 decision to Bruins in New Westminster on Friday night.

Rookie Don Biault (2), Glen Wylie, Paul Enquist and Roy Summers replied for Calgary in a game that featured plenty of hard hitting.

A total of 56 minutes in penalties were handed out and the teams plit four major penalties for fighting.

Stamp Playoff Hopes Hang on B.C. Defeat

By The Canadian Press

Edmonton Eskimos meet Saskatchewan Roughriders at Edmonton on Sunday in the hopes of chalking up a win that will leave them within one point of clinching the Western Football Conference title.

In the other WFC game this weekend, Calgary Stampeders visit British Columbia Lions tonight. A Lions win will almost ruin any playoff hopes for the Stampeders.

Edmonton is in first place and Saskatchewan is second. Eskimo Coach Ray Jauch says a win Sunday means "the more time we have to get right physically and find the right combination for the post-season games."

The Eskimos have a number of players hurting, including Roy Bell and Leroy Jones, each with a sore knee, Tom Wilkinson nursing his back, hips and ribs, and Sam Britts with a neck injury. But all are expected to play.

Jauch realizes his team has been cutting it close, winning six games this season in the final minutes of play.

And he says Saskatchewan is "still the team to beat."

"Every year, everybody tries to sell them short by saying this is finally the year everything will catch up to them and every year it's garbage," he said. "They're looking better now than they have all year. They're hitting their playoff form."

Dave Cutler, the Eskimo kicker, has a special interest in the game Sunday. He'll be trying to break former Calgary Stampeder Larry Robinson's career record of 171 field goals. He tied it last Saturday in Calgary.

Lions coach Cal Murphy is mum about lineup changes and says he has not made up his mind about a placekicker, pondering the talents of Ivan MacMillan and Ed Thomas.

The Stampeders are in good health with the exception of Howard Starks who will be absent from the defensive backfield for one more game.

NFL Clubs Score At Rapid Pace

By The Associated Press

New Orleans Saints no doubt will be thrilled to hear that scoring is up all around the National Football League.

Studiously avoiding the end zone so far this season, New Orleans has managed only three points on a field goal in the first two games.

That averages out to 1½ points a game while the Saints' defence has surrendered 31 a game. Now you know why New Orleans takes an 0-2 mark into Sunday's game at Atlanta.

The Falcons are also 0-2, but they've come close, losing each of their starts by just three points.

Meanwhile, Washington Redskins, Buffalo Bills and Minnesota Vikings, all undefeated, have led a host of high scoring offences through the season's first two weeks.

Washington has scored 90 points with Billy Kilmer throwing six touchdown passes in two games.

Buffalo, with O. J. Simpson gaining a two-game record of 400 yards, has scored 72 points.

Minnesota, not usually a high-scoring team, has put 69 points on the scoreboard. Oakland Raiders have 62 points and Denver Broncos 60. Even winless Kansas City Chiefs have scored 57.

The average of 43.1 points a game for the first two weeks is the highest NFL figure since 1967 and is a shade under nine points higher than the two-week figure of a year ago.

Kilmer leads the Redskins' scoring show into Philadelphia on Sunday. Buffalo plays host to Denver in a matchup that could produce offensive fireworks. The Broncos hope to have running back Otis Armstrong healthy.

Dodgers Again Lead

NEW YORK (AP) — Major league baseball, led by Los Angeles Dodgers and Cincinnati Reds in the National League and Boston Red Sox in the American League, recorded its third-best attendance in history, commissioner Bowie Kuhn said Friday.

The unofficial total for 1975 was 29,811,942 by the 24 clubs. That was down 213,666 from a year ago, but the decrease was blamed on 17 postponements, 10 in the final month.

The 1975 total also helped set a record of 89,946,476 for a three-year period, the commissioner said. The all-time single-season record of 30,108,926 was set in 1973.

The Dodgers, the NL West defending champions, led the majors once again with 2,539,349 while Cincinnati, this year's champion, was second in the majors at 2,315,603. Boston, winner in the East, led the American League with 1,748,443.

DETROIT (CP) — Left winger Danny Grant, who scored 50 goals for Detroit Red Wings last season, has been named captain of the National Hockey League team.

Players Must Pay For Violent Play

TORONTO (CP) — The Canadian Football League went 47 games this season without any undue violence. That record of tolerance took a beating Sept. 28.

In game 48 at Regina between the Saskatchewan Roughriders and British Columbia Lions, three players were banished. Game No. 49 at Calgary, featuring the Stampeders and Edmonton Eskimos, saw four players ejected for fighting.

CFL commissioner Jake Gaudaur has fined all seven players $50 for their misdemeanors and threatened to increase the figure if any of the combatants puts on a repeat performance this year.

B.C.'s Slade Willis and 'Riders' George Wells and Ray Odums were disqualified from the game at Regina for fighting; Joe Forzani, Glenn Scolnik and Henry Sovio of Calgary, along with Bob McLaren of Edmonton, were sent off in the game at Calgary.

Bulgarian Sets New Lift Mark

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — Bulgarian weightlifter George Todorov set a world record for the 132-pound weight class Friday when he snatched 281¾ pounds in an international tournament at Varna on the Black Sea.

The previous record of 280½ pounds was held by Norair Nourikyan, also of Bulgaria.

'Amateur' Efforts Can Be Rewarding

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Top amateur athletes in Western Europe are dipping into official subsidies and under-the-table slush funds to finance full-time training for the 1976 Olympics, European sports sources report.

Although amateur rules forbid secret cash incentives for Olympic competitors, an Associated Press survey of eight countries shows that many stars can earn at least $20,000 a year from their sport and still retain amateur status.

All Western European countries subsidize medal candidates with cash payments, usually several hundred dollars a month, for food, medical treatment, travel, "lost income" and other proveable expenses while training for the Games.

West Germany's Sports Aid Endowment Fund distributes 12 million marks — $4.8 million — annually to some 2,000 "needy" Olympic hopefuls, plus another three million marks — $1.1 million — to finance specialized training for 350 athletes selected for the 1976 Olympic team.

Italian medal candidates in swimming and running, premier events at the Summer Games in Montreal, are getting up to 300,000 lire — $500 a month — in sanctioned subsidies, sources in Rome report. But proven winners can triple this income from payoffs by their business-backed sports clubs.

Austria, host for the 1976 winter Games in Innsbruck, hands out genereous subsidies to its star alpine skiers. They collect as much as 450,000 shillings — $22,500 — a year from the national ski pool funded by equipment manufacturers, plus $1,200 or more for winning international races, informants in Vienna said.

Sweden's Olympic medal hopefuls get yearly official training subsidies of 15,000 kroner — $1,000. But Stockholm informants also say amateur runners there can pocket $1,000 a meet and top hockey players, $20,000 a year.

Olympic candidates in Denmark, Norway, Finland, France and Britain are also getting "bread-and-butter" subsidies and free equipment funneled through national sports federations. But there, as elsewhere, most amateur stars also have "ghost" incomes from commercial ties with manufacturers or liberal contracts with sports clubs.

An indisputed compensation for amateur athletes is sports equipment, emblazoned with trademarks, provided free by the manufacturers.

One well-known West German company said it outfits 100 top German sportsmen each year with free sets of competition shoes, warmup suits and other gear worth $400. In return, the athletes must stay with the trademark during the one-year contract period.

Kids' Hockey Hit by Cost of Living

PREPARING for new minor hockey season, two little guys were having trouble staying on skates in action around goaltender during workout Friday at Juan de Fuca Arena. Like most other minor hockey groups in province, Juan de Fuca organization has experienced drop in player registrations this season. (Times photo by John McKay.)

When the British Columbia Amateur Hockey Association held its annual convention two weeks ago in Langford, there was talk of another gloomy season.

Members said the BCHA would probably be in the red for a third straight year because of increased costs of operation, in keeping with the general economy, and a decline in registration.

Take the over-all figures, for instance. Seven of nine associations polled, including one private organization, have experienced a drop. Five of those have a decrease in registration of between 40 and 60 while another has lost 20.

The biggest loss belongs to the Victoria association. It has lost 275 players, but the major reason is the establishment of the Oak Bay Association with its new arean.

"We don't mind at all that so many kids aren't with us this year," said Victoria spokesperson Louise Smith. "With less kids, it gives more ice time to the boys who are still with us."

Mrs. Smith also felt the "present state of the economy" has a lot to do with the registration drop.

"Look at the cost of skates and equipment and the unemployment in Victoria recently," she said, "and you can understand why some parents can't afford to let their kids play."

The rising cost of living was blamed by other associations for the registration drop-off.

"Besides the cost of equipment, it's expensive for parents to drive their children to practice each week because of the cost of gas," said Ted Knott, Lake Cowichan association president.

Oak Bay, which has 275 boys registered is a new association.

The only lower Island association that has not had a drop is Mill Bay, which has increased 100 from last year's 330 total.

The obvious reason for the increase, said president Brian Harrison, is the new arena. With it, all the boys are guaranteed at least 2½ hours ice time a week.

Because of the increased number, Mill Bay has been able to keep its registration fees the same as last year. It is $35 for the first boy of a family and $30 for the second.

The Racquet Club of Victoria, the lone private club surveyed, has 262 players registered, far behind last year's 325. However, registrar Tom Mazar said the chances are good the Racquet Club will reach last year's figure because there is "no date to end registration."

The smallest drop in registration belongs to the Chemainus association. It has 455 players this year, down 20 from last season.

But president Bob Clarkson is concerned. Most of the drop occurred in midget and juvenile ranks and Clarkson intends to da survey to find out why.

Fees for Chemainus are the same as last season. It costs $27 for juveniles and $24 for all other age groups.

Juan de Fuca has the largest registration with 656 players. That is still down from last year when there were about 725. Fees are $40 for new players and $35 for those previously in the organization. Both rates are up $5.

Esquimalt has 275 players registered which is a drop of 50 from last year. The hardest-hit age group is the pups (age 9-10), down 20. Fees for veteran players are still $35 but for new players they're up $10 to $45.

The second largest drop belongs to Saanich. Last year, the association had 646 players. This year the total is down 59 to 587. The major reason for the decrease is that three pup teams were disbanded so a juvenile representative team could be formed.

Saanich fees are $35 for veterans and $40 for newcomers, both up $5.

Lake Cowichan has 335 registered players this season. Officials expect that number to swell to 350 before registration ends, but that would still be 30 fewer players than last year.

The registration fee has also been increased for all players, from $20 to $30.

Delay in Course-Building Sent January Back to Tour

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — But for the state of the economy, Don January would be home in Dallas happily building golf courses all over Texas.

"I've got two courses under contract but we can't get started until things get a little better," the 45-year-old tour veteran said Friday. "When folks can't build houses, they don't need golf courses."

So, with the downturn in the nation's economy, January—who had left the tour some four years ago—dug his long-unused clubs out of the garage and rejoined the tour at the start of this season.

And, with most of the record gallery of 12,475 concentrating on Jack Nicklaus, Johnny Miller and Lee Trevino, the slowtalking Texan ambled almost unnoticed out of the pack with a course-record eight-under-par 64 that staked him to a one-shot lead in Friday's second round of the $175,000 Kaiser International open golf tournament.

He birdied six of his last seven holes and had six one-putts on his first nine holes.

He established a two-round total of 134, 10 under par. He played the tougher north course at the Silverado Country Club in 70 on opening day and set the record on the shorter, easier south course Friday. Only the north course will be used for the last two rounds.

One shot off his pace at 135 was the quartet of Miller, the defending champion, Trevino, Gene Littler and Marty Fleckman, with rookie Bobby Wadkins one more stroke back at 136.

Miller went nine under par with a second-round 67 despite his assertion that "I haven't had better than a mediocre putting round yet."

Trevino came from well back with a 65. Littler shot a 70. Fleckman, who hasn't made expenses since his lone victory in 1967, had a 67. The 24-year-old Wadkins stayed close with a 70.

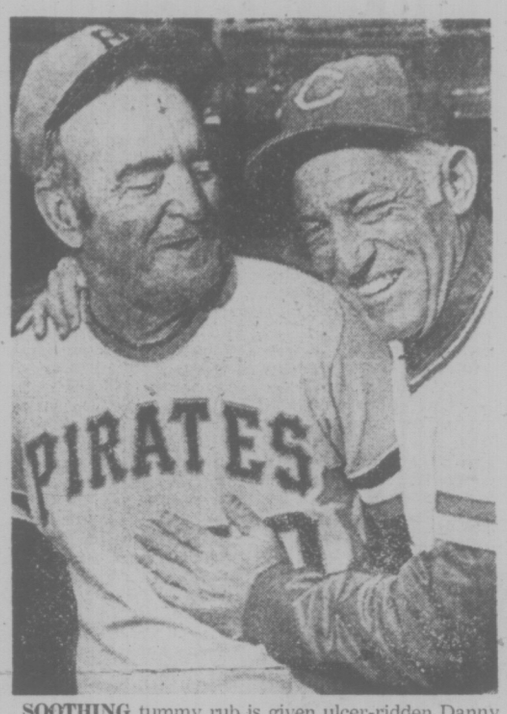
Manager With A Mild Manner



SOOTHING tummy rub is given ulcer-ridden Danny Murtaugh (left) by rival manager Sparky Anderson of Cincinnati Reds, who meet Pirates in today's National League playoff opener. (AP Wirephoto)

WASHINGTON (WP) — Danny Murtaugh may be the least impressive looking person in baseball. His whole body seems rumpled and older than its 58 years. His craggy, hawk-nosed face looks like something slept on it and forgot to straighten the covers.

In Pittsburgh's dugout, manager Murtaugh seldom moves and often appears asleep. His coaches go to the mound to make pitching changes. Even chewing out an umpire seems like too much effort. After games, he sits in a rocking chair and sips milk.

Murtaugh is a teetotaler, a grandfather with a heart condition, an Irishman so outwardly mild that his players seem to do as they please.

When the Pirates clinched their fifth National League East Division title in six years, and the fourth straight in complete seasons under Murtaugh, it was easy for him to be overlooked as he usually is. He didn't mind. "We're kind of quiet around here," he said.

The Baltimore Orioles needed only two words to sum up Murtaugh's tactical style in their "book" on Pittsburgh before the 1971 World Series: "No surprises," it said.

For the record, Murtaugh is 16th among managers in career winning percentage and 26th in victories. In 11 full seasons, not counting three partial years, he has finished first five times and won two World Series. Pittsburgh's only ones in 50 years.

Murtaugh was not always the patron saint of those with acid indigestion. In 1947, at 30, he was still an inveterate minor leaguer, fond of all-night poker, horse racing and a bit of night life. After one all-nighter he learned several lessons from his Boston Brave manager, Billy Southworth.

One spring training eve Murtaugh and roommate Ernie White spent an entire night finding ways to distribute $700 that Murtaugh had won at the track. They reported unshaven to the ballpark next day, without intersecting with their roadside motel room.

"Have a good night's sleep, fellows?" asked Southworth.

"Sure, skip," fibbed Murtaugh. "Like babies."

"That's good, said Southworth. "I was afraid you might have been disturbed by the tractor-trailer that crashed through your room in the middle of the night."

The experience sobered Murtaugh. "Ernie and I wouldn't have made it if we'd been in that room," he recalls. He went on the next season to have his best year, a .290 average and 52 votes for Most Valuable Player, with pittsburgh. He also learned the soft-spoken approach.

He needed it. Murtaugh's career reached bottom in 1955 when he was fired as Charleston manager. He caught on as a Pirate coach in 1956 but only after one Tom Tatum turned up his nose at the job. Murtaugh was named Pittsburgh manager for the final two months of 1957 but only after Clyde Sukeforth turned it down.

The job was sure dead end. The Pirates wanted eight weeks of silence, managing by benign neglect, so fans and players could forget the tirades of brash Bobby Bragan who presaged his dismissal by serving orange drinks to the umpires.

Murtaugh quickly established his style — conservative on the field, understanding off it, the opposite of Bragan. In three years the Pirates were champs, just one of three times Murtaugh (who has retired three times for his health) has taken the reins and turned the Bucs from patsies to champs.

More Stock Car Changes Coming

By JIM CREAR
Times Staff

Look for more changes at Western Speedway next summer — possibly a return to the jalopy class.

There weren't enough claimer class drivers in action this past year to satisfy officials of the speedway and the Vancouver Island Track Racing Association, governing body of area stock car racing.

In short, the claimers are threatening to price themselves out of existence.

Speedway spokesman Barry Rankin explained that rule changes of a year ago, mainly designed to improve competition in the superstock class, paved the way for claimer owners to spend more money on their cars.

They were permitted to use racing tires, there was no limit on the size of the engine and only the engine instead of the complete car could be claimed for the $199 price. The idea there was to improve the appearance of car bodies.

One claimer driver was rumored to have spent $3,000 on his car.

As Rankin pointed out, expenses such as that defeat the purpose of the class, designed to encourage new stock car drivers.

This season, there were 24 registered claimers at Western but many dropped out. Several were rookie drivers, including Jim Smith, Bill Hitchcox, Bill Bartley, Gary Bemister and Rick Haskell. Many who lasted the season were prepared to spend money to be competitive.

"We'd like to make it possible to get into stock car racing for $300 or $400," Rankin said.

When VITRA holds its annual meeting next Tuesday it will consider several proposals:

—Limit the series to cars manufactured between 1950 and 1960;

—Impose limits on suspension modifications;

—Limit engine sizes to six cylinder or smaller and allow no racing components;

—Allow only one racing tire — the right front for safety — with the remaining three to be stock tires;

—Abolish claiming of cars or engines.

There are not likely to be many changes to superstock rules, which underwent sweeping reforms a year ago.

There may be more open class racing, however, as several drivers have indicated they will move up from the superstock division. Among them are points champion Tony Johnson, Gary Kershaw, Neil Montgomery and Bill Price.

Playoff Rivals Evenly Matched

NEW YORK (AP) — You couldn't find more evenly-matched teams than those in the baseball playoffs that started today.

Cincinnati Reds and Pittsburgh Pirates, contenders for the National League pennant, split a 12-game series during the 1975 season.

The West-winning Reds and East champion Pirates were so closely matched during the season, in fact, that they scored the same amount of runs — 55.

Oakland A's, champions in the West, and the East-winning Boston Red Sox similarly each won six games of their 12-game American League series. But the A's showed more hitting power, outscoring the Red Sox 67-50 during the season.

The home field advantage was significant in each case — with each of the teams holding a 4-2 edge at home. This could come into play next week since the defending world champion A's will play three of the five-game set in Oakland and the Pirates also will have that extra game at home.

The playoffs open with two-game sets today and Sunday. Pittsburgh is at Cincinnati while Oakland is at Boston.

No Need to Beef About Price of Bacon

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

With bacon the hideous price it is these days, the shopper who actually buys the stuff on a regular basis has got to be richer or rasher than most.

But, as more and more Saanich residents are discovering, there is a cheaper way of bringing home the bacon.

It looks, smells and, to many palates, even tastes like the real thing. But it's called beef bacon.

That's right, beef bacon. And if you've never heard of it don't feel badly, for many butchers in town haven't either.

Glen Hassard, manager of Lakehill Meats Ltd. at Quadra and Reynolds, says he believes theirs is the only meat market in the Greater Victoria area selling this item, and he's obviously not unhappy about the fact.

The store has had beef bacon on its shelves for only about two months but already it's "going like a landslide," Hassard said.

"We sell about 500 pounds a week and we've run out once already this week."

Reason for the popularity is obvious, regular bacon sells for anything up to $2.89 per pound, and at those prices the crisp 'n' crackly strips have entered the caviar bracket for thousands of erstwhile consumers.

This week, Lakehill Meats was selling its beef bacon at $1.39.

Hassard said while it's a relatively new food out here, it's been around for years on the Prairies.

The long wedge of meat comes from the lower, fleshy part of the cow's belly, which is smoked and cured in the usual way and then sliced. Lakehill Meats does its own smoking and curing, a process which takes about a week.

The manager says it's a lot leaner than the bacon from your average porker. As for flavor: "With certain parts of it you can't tell the difference."

Putting that claim to the test at breakfast today, this reporter found it mostly justified. Beef bacon does lack a certain je ne sais quoi in tanginess, but it's definitely tasty.

And the more one thinks about the price, the better the flavor seems.

Surprisingly few meat merchants contacted this week had never heard of the product, however.

"But then we're pretty old-fashioned out here," he laughed.

Mike Hall, manager of Williams Quality Meats at 795 Fort, was even more intrigued: "It certainly sounds interesting. I'll have to inquire into it."

But beef bacon was nothing new to Al Bailey, owner of Victoria Meat Market at 625 Johnson, who remembers efforts several years ago to popularize the food.

Bailey said he doesn't get more than about one customer request a year for beef bacon, and in any case he doubts there are any local packers who can supply it to the trade.

"It will always have some popularity but it doesn't have the same flavor (as regular bacon) and I don't think it will ever take its place," he said.

Who knows? If beef bacon catches on it may allow us all to get back to the old rind . . .

CPR Tracks Kept Open For Exports

The CPR said Friday afternoon it would maintain full rail connections for the benefit of Victoria industries that wished to export freight to Seattle by way of Nanaimo and Vancouver.

However, the CPR repeated its statement that it will stop its barge service Monday and it will not allow Seaspan access to the rail link to carry on the service on its own. Seaspan officials said they could not carry on with the service unless the CPR permits it to use the rail link as an export route.

Talks were continuing between Seaspan and the CPR on the issue.

Seaspan has its own rail line on its property but it requires the right to use the connection link, owned by the CPR, if it is going to receive loaded freight cars from Victoria industries.

The company said it decided Friday to continue honoring an agreement regarding a siding from the CPR to the property of Seaspan International Ltd. at 345 Harbor.

On Thursday night the company had said the siding might be removed.

While the siding will remain in operation, freight traffic will be in one direction only. The siding will assist companies near the Seaspan property to send freight by rail to Nanaimo, then by barge to Vancouver and then by truck to Seattle.

The Victoria Chamber of Commerce has urged the CPR to reinstitute its direct barge service to Seattle or permit Seaspan to take it over.

The reprieve of the rail link, announced Friday afternoon, does not resolve the basic issue raised by the chamber about keeping the direct barge service to Seattle in operation.

The service will be terminated Monday morning unless Seaspan and the CPR come to an agreement about the use of the rail siding over the weekend.

Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Jack Hutchins said Friday morning that Victoria industries will be at a competitive disadvantage if freight must be routed by way of the lower mainland before proceeding to Seattle.

Waves Whipped to 15-Foot Mark

Wind Capsizes Two Boats

At least two boats sank at the government wharf in Sidney Friday night as a wet and windy frontal system passed over the area.

A spokesman for the Pacific Rescue Centre said there were numerous reports of small boats in trouble as the storm whipped up the seas in the Gulf of Georgia creating 10 to 15-foot high waves.

The most serious incident occurred at about 6 p.m. when a small boat lost power, drifted into the Steveston jetty and capsized. Two people on board were saved but another two — an elderly man and woman — are missing and presumed drowned. A search for their bodies is continuing this morning.

It was a rough crossing for late travellers aboard B.C. ferries between Tsawwassen and Swartz Bay. One of them reported many passengers were seasick and the cafeteria was shut down. Passengers were advised to stay in their seats.

The Rescue Centre said two fishing vessels flipped over in heavy seas off the mouth of the Fraser River but there was no loss of life.

Greater Victoria police said the inclement weather contributed to a number of motor vehicle accidents, mostly minor except for a mishap in Esquimalt at about 9:45 p.m. when 60-year-old Gordon Boley of 841 Esquimalt was struck by a car as he crossed the road in the 800 block Esquimalt.

Boley is listed in fair condition in Victoria General Hospital with multiple injuries.

Victoria fire department was called to Montgomery and Charles at 7:30 p.m. when a powerline blew down and was sparking in some trees.

A B.C. Hydro spokesman said power cuts were spotty throughout the area with William Head most severely affected. Crews worked through the night to restore power.

The Victoria Weather station said conditions tonight should be cool and clear but another weather system is approaching and should hit the area by late Sunday.

DIPHTHERIA RE-APPEARS

Diphtheria has once again appeared in Greater Victoria with two confirmed cases in the past two weeks, Dr. Allan Arneil, regional health officer, said Friday.

The once-dreaded disease, still classified as dangerous, has broken out locally over fall and winter in recent years, only to disappear in the spring.

Arneil said its reappearance is an occasion to remind parents once more that children should be immunized at community health clinics or by the family doctor. An immunization program through the schools provides booster shots every five years but the first shot should be given at pre-school age, he said.

One of the current cases was an infection of the skin while the other was found by the more common throat swab.

People who haye been immunized can still contract the disease but are protected from the virulent toxin it produces. Frequently the only symptom in such cases will be a sore throat.

But such people can serve as carriers and the danger is they can infect others who have not been immunized. Diphtheria is highly contageous.

Arneil said that apart from treatment with drugs, standard practice is to quarantine victims and their immediate family for at least 10 days.

While this is a considerable inconvenience to some, it is also essential because it is still a dangerous disease, he said.

Experts, TV Make 'Square Society'

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Children model themselves after others — if not parents, then someone else. Who are children imitating these days?

"We're becoming a very square society," suggests child psychiatrist Phillip Ney, "more like each other every day."

And why?

Because children around the world are adopting more models in common, television characters like Mannix who reach vast audiences unknown to earlier generations.

Then there's the little league coach, the cub master, the teacher, the driving instructor — in a word, the "expert."

Most parents say: "I want the best for my children. So they get the experts to teach them, forgetting the expert also serves as a model.

Ney suggests all this poses a significent question: who are the real parents of today's children, the natural parents, or someone else?

And whatever answer you come up with, is this what you want?

He says the evidence that violence on television begets violence is simply overwhelming. And truth to tell it's not just children but adults too who are much more influenced than they will admit by the bigger-than-life models.

"Children and Violence — social models for anti-social behavior" is the topic of a husband and wife team of speakers at a public lecture next Friday.

Drs. Robert and Linda Peterson, from the department of psychology at the University of Nevada, have researched the subject for many years, Ney says.

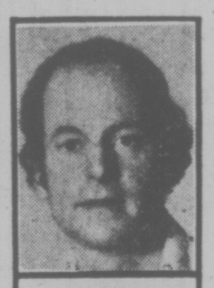
They will speak at Oak Bay junior high school Oct. 10 at 8 p.m. Admission is $2.

Before that the Petersons will take part in a seminar and workshops for professionals in the field dealing with contemporary therapies for troubled children.

That program, next Wednesday to Friday at the Eric Martin Institute is being presented by the department of psychiatry at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Ney said it is for teachers, nurses, social workers, doctors, child care workers, law enforcement officers, school counsellors and probation officers and will teach a variety of techniques, borrowed or developed, which staff at EMI's children's unit have found successful.

Vic West Man Fights Tel Error



Inflation, they say it is.

And costs of just about everything leap with such astounding frequency that it's almost impossible to keep track of the increases.

But then Fellowes Hewett is making a pretty good job of keeping tabs on one big firm — the British Columbia Telephone Co. Ltd. — and on the increases it has made and hopes to make.

Fellowes who?

Who's he when he's in town? Or out of town, as the case is more likely to be. Like last week when he was over in Vancouver presenting his submissions to a Canadian Transport Commission hearing on whether a new 20-percent rate increase sought by B.C. Tel should be granted or not.

Well, Fellowes Hewett is a thinking man who lives in a boarding house in Vic West and who likes to think he is representing the interests of all the little men and women in B.C.

Telephone rates were increased by 10 per cent Aug. 1 and Commission committee chairman Guy Roberge said a decision on the present application should be ready "about mid-October."

The increase was opposed by the B.C. attorney-general's department because it felt the company "hasn't acted in the public interest."

Fellowes, who first appeared at CTC hearings with a 25-page brief last year, says he isn't for or against a rate increase, and he isn't fighting B.C. Tel at all — he's fighting a mistake they made.

In 1972, he explains, B.C. Tel restructured its rates, introducing one rate for DDD (direct distance dialing) calls and another rate for operator-assisted calls. He isn't against that.

"But instead of putting a straight 15-cent surcharge for operator handling, they came up with a completely separate rate structure which produced 67 wildly varying surcharges," he complains.

On a three-minute call, says Hewett, the effective surcharge ranges from two cents to $1.31. And above that, the overtime minutes are charged at a higher rate — anywhere from one and-a-half cents to 23½ cents per minute for the overtime.

"This more than doubles the price of the call," he says.

"I demonstrated in my 1974 brief that, because there is no discount after 11 p.m. on the overtime minutes, calls over three minutes are higher in B.C. than the trans-continental rate," says Fellows.

For example, he says, it's 46½ cents across B.C. compared with 30 cents per minute across Canada.

"On a three-minute call, it's cheaper to phone across B.C.," he admits. "But as soon as you start running into overtime, your longer calls become much more expensive here.

"If you talk long enough, it would be cheaper, in fact, to call Victoria from a motel in Newfoundland than it would to phone Victoria from Abbotsford — and that's just ridiculous.

"All this is because there were two separate rate structures instead of a simple fee for operator handling — to which they are entitled," Hewett insists.

HEWETT
. . . keeping tabs

Fellowes says he has shown B.C. Tel how it can eliminate the excess charges on evening and late night calls for operator handling and recoup the annual loss of $1.8 million by adding three cents to the first minute of every DDD call, thus producing a more equitable distribution of charges.

But at the hearings, the company said in evidence that it does not have the data, nor the system to produce it, to make the changes.

When the hearings ended, Anne Carver, one of the commissioners, made special mention of Hewett's "generous gift of time and intelligence" to the deliberations.

And when you sit down for a long chat with Fellowes Hewett, you get to realize that time and intelligence are two things he had plenty of.

Born in England of Canadian parents, Hewett says he "feels 35" and won't confess to being any older. He's retired, but you're not quite sure, what from. Never "career-oriented", he served as a navigator-instructor in the Royal Canadian Air Force in the Second World War and later did a multitude of things. He was a hardrock miner in the Great Bear Lake area, a sailor, a salesman and now he edits a small community newspaper. Soon he is opening a consultancy in partnership with another Victoria resident.

Money is something he doesn't have much of. But it doesn't bother him. He is on welfare ("an absolutely essential stepping stone") right now, usually hitch-hikes when he goes over to the hearings and places little importance on appearances.

Clad in simple clothes, Fellowes rolls himself a cigarette from tobacco he carries in an old tin that still has the strawberry jam label, leans back and says:

"Life is beautiful."

"I feel it's every citizen's duty to fight for the correction of a mistake or an injustice," he says simply.

"The fundamental lesson I have learned is that we must destroy for all time the myth that you can't beat the system," he says.

Extra Funds For Project

An additional grant of $23,608 for the St. John's Court Society 18-unit housing project at 1013 Quadra in Victoria, has been approved by Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson.

It is to help meet extra costs amounting to $70,824. The province's original grant was for $131,333.

Ask the Times

Q. I would like to know if it is possible in this country for a non-Canadian citizen to hold political office as either prime minister or premier. R.N:

A. Both federal and provincial elections acts require that candidates for office be qualified as voters. A voter in provincial elections can be either a Canadian citizen or British subject. In federal elections the voter — and thus the candidate — must be a Canadian citizen.

Q. Who started the Red Cross? T.R.

A. The founder of the International Red Cross was Jean Henri Dunant, a Swiss philanthropist. He was touring Italy in 1859 during the Austro-Sardinian War when he saw the field at Solferino the day after 40,000 men had been killed or wounded in battle. Horrified at the suffering of the wounded, he formed a group of volunteers to help them.

Q. Where did the term Indian summer originate? R.O.

A. The origin of the name Indian summer is uncertain. One story says that the American settlers named the period after the American Indians, who told the settlers that this period would come. Another story says that the settlers used the name because this period of good weather gave the war-like Indians a chance to make more attacks on the settlers. The settlers also believed that the smokiness of Indian summer came from fires that the Indians built on the prairies.

Smooth Switch In Bridge Patrol

The switchover from full-time to part-time manning of the Johnson Street Bridge appears to have been accomplished smoothly, city engineer John Sansom said Friday.

"We're bound to run into one or two minor teething problems but so far everything is going well and we think we have covered all major eventualities," he said.

Effective midnight Tuesday the bridge operation changed to a new schedule which will see it manned for only 79 hours per week instead of the former round-the-clock service.

An operator is now on duty for bridge lifting on weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and from 6 p.m. to midnight; on Saturdays and Sundays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Marine users who require the bridge to be lifted at any other time must give "4 hours' notice and pay $50 per lift.

Sansom said an emergency telephone service has been set up so that vessels delayed at sea which won't arrive at a time when the bridge is normally manned can make the necessary arrangements.

Similarly, if there is a disaster at sea requiring the immediate despatch of a rescue vessel, "we can get a man down there to work the bridge as quickly as they can man a tug," he said.

Among the happiest about the new schedule are the two full-time bridge operators, said the city engineer.

"They don't work any fewer hours but at least they are regular hours — and there's no crummy graveyard shift."

Two other employees formerly required for the bridge operation have been switched to other jobs in the department.

Firehall Fate Decision Near

Saanich council is expected to decide Monday on the future use of the old Saanich No. 3 firehall on Shelbourne, vacated by the fire brigade some 18 months ago.

"Quite a few" bids for use of the building have been received from community organizations, according to Saanich municipal clerk Gordon Hayward.

He said a recommendation from council's lands committee will go before council Monday, but he declined to elaborate.

One of the applicants, The Warehouse Alternative School, has voiced concern that council may have rejected its bid for use of the hall.

Veronica Doyle, a co-ordinator of the alternative school, temporarily housed in the Sacred Heart Parish Hall, 4040 Nelthorpe, said Friday the school has finally received funding from the provincial government.

Funding had been in jeopardy, but about $49,000 was awarded to the project by the human resources and education departments, she said. Now organizers are looking for a permanent location for the school and the firehall would be just perfect, she added.

She said she is certain that if council was aware of the benefits of the school, council would accept their bid of $300 a month rental of the hall. They could raise the bid, but not a lot more.

The alternative school provides instruction for some 60 high school and adult students who found it difficult to learn in regular school situations. It operates under contract to the Saanich School District and started some three years ago.

PEN GUARDS DENY HARASSMENT

NEW WESTMINSTER (CP) — Three British Columbia Penitentiary guards Friday denied allegations of harassment of prisoners.

The guards also said in federal court that they didn't point guns, make rude remarks or make unauthorized use of tear gas.

Theodore Koenig, Daniel Young and Joseph Carrier were testifying in a civil action by eight B.C. Penitentiary prisoners seeking a declaration that solitary confinement is cruel and unusual punishment under the Canadian Bill of Rights.

Koenig told Mr. Justice D. V. Healt that he had never pointed a gun at prisoners Donald Oag and Andy Bruce. He said he had been in the army for 10 years before becoming a guard seven years ago and that he kne whow to handle a rifle.

The guard said he had never used tear gas in the solitary confinement unit and had never forced anyone to take medication.

Young, a former B.C. Penitentiary guard now working in an institution at Matsqui, as a living unit officer, said he "never made outstanding statements about drug addicts" and that the pointing of guns "never ever takes place."

Carrier, a B.C. Penitentiary guard for 17 years, said he wos bilingual and that he had several conversations with prisoner Jacques Bellemare, who strangled himself April 17, 1974.

He said he found a parole board letter to Bellemare in the prisoner's cell just after the suicide. The letter said that Bellemare was eligible for parole in April, 1993, Carrier said.

The guard said that on one occasion — October, 1973 — he used tear gas on instructions from his superior when three prisoners, in the same cell began beating against the door.

He said the incident followed a general prison disturbance in which 89 prisoners were put fn the solitary unit. Some individual cells held three, five or six men, he said.

Guard William Maurice Ford, officer in charge of the solitary unit for the last four months, said that he used tear gas on a prisoner named Tepholm on orders from his superior.

FAREWELL to Victoria was said Friday by the 3rd Battalion Princess Patricia's Canadian Light Infantry in colorful ceremonies heralding a six-month peace-keeping assignment in Cyprus. The battalion was inspected by Mayor Peter Pollen, who delivered a farewell address and then spelled out the Freedom of the City already granted to the battalion in the summer of 1974. The men marched past the reviewing stand in front of the Legislative Buildings and through the streets of the city, according to their privilege of freedom.

$1-A-Day Hospital Charge 'Nuisance'

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Health Association has passed a resolution requesting the provincial government to eliminate the $1-a-day hospital charge to patients.

The motion by the Campbell River District Hospital was approved Friday at the association's annual meeting.

It was exactly opposite to an earlier suggestion by John Benham, BCHA past president, that the charge be increased.

The 500 hospital trustees, administrators and others in the BCHA were advised to either increase the rate or drop it altogether because of the cost involved with accounting staffs.

Ed Desjardin, manager of the G. F. Strong Rehabilitation Centre of Vancouver, called the present charge "really only of nuisance value."

Clear-Cut Logging 'Affecting Water'

KAMLOOPS (CP) — Clear-cut logging and slash burning are having drastic effects on water quality during spring runoffs in the Okanagan and Shuswap-Thompson areas, briefs to the Pearse Royal Commission on Forest Resources said Friday.

The commission was also told reforestation isn't keeping pace with the number of logs being cut in separate briefs submitted by the Okanagan-Similkameen Parks Society and the Shuswap-Thompson River Research and Development Association.

"We aren't complaining about selective logging going on at lower levels in the Okanagan," said John Woodworth, a director of the parks society. "But we are concerned about clear-cut harvesting in watersheds at higher levels."

Visits to clear-cut areas during spring runoff showed muddy streams on every sloping skid trail, the brief said.

Eventually the mud found its way to streams and reservoirs that supply the lower valley with water.

★

NELSON (CP) — B.C. Hydro has negotiated a settlement with Margerete Windsor of Passmore, B.C., who was fighting expropriation of part of her property for a hydro right-of-way. The settlement gives the woman $15,000.

★

PRINCE GEORGE (CP) — Unfavorable weather conditions were "likely a factor" in Tuesday's plane crash 360 miles northwest of here in which seven persons were killed, an RCMP investigator said Friday. Sgt. Gordon Simonson, who flew to the site, said it is not possible to draw any definite conclusion until an investigation is completed.

VANCOUVER (CP) — Edwin C. Phillips, president of Westcoast Transmission Co. Ltd., has proposed an extension of natural gas exports to the U.S. beyond the contract termination year 1989 as a method of phasing out the export.

Phillips makes the proposal in prepared testimony to the National Energy Board in an application for a 140-mile pipeline extension to connect with a projected Mackenzie Valley pipeline from the Western Arctic.

Grade 12 Awards Hiked To $500

RICHMOND (CP) — Grade 12 provincial scholarships will be increased to $500 from $200 next year, Education Minister Eileen Dailly said Friday night.

In addition, local school districts will have a say in the allocation of some of the scholarships, the minister said in a speech opening a new junior secondary school in this municipality south of Vancouver.

"Many students have not been writing scholarship exams because they could be out of school and earning the $200 in the time that it took to write the examinations," the minister said.

"We hope that the $500 award will provide a greater incentive for young people to try for the scholarships."

Under the new program, which is also open to independent school students, the number of scholarships available to each school district in the province will be based on four per cent of the Grade 12 enrolment, with three per cent of the students receiving scholarships based on departmental exams and one per cent being awarded the scholarships on criteria set by local school boards.

BABIES CROWDED AT PORT HARDY

VANCOUVER (CP) — Gloria Aranas, a Port Hardy hospital trustee, said Friday that facilities are so inadequate at the 10-bed Port Hardy Hospital that the only nursery is a nurses' station.

Mrs. Aranas told delegates attending the annual meeting of the British Columbia Health Association that sometimes six babies are crowded into an area eight feet by 10 feet.

She said the hospital was not designed to handle deliveries, but is in constant demand.

The hospital serves an estimated 8,000 people, she said, and there is one emergency department bed and one delivery room bed available in a corner of the building.

Mrs. Aranas said sometimes an emergency patient has to be placed in the labor bed, depending which bed is in use at the time.

"But if a third person comes in during these times — either an emergency case or a woman in labor — where do we put them?" she asked.

Marriage Preparation Urged for Teenagers

The provincial government has been urged to give special consideration to teen-agers in extensive education programs on preparation for marriage.

The eighth report of the family and children's law commission, released Friday by Human Resources Minister Norm Levi says "there is a great deal of evidence to support the conclusion that teenage marriages are especially vulnerable to breakdown."

But the commission does not recommend imposing a mandatory preparation for marriage program for all teen-agers — who represented 17 per cent of the total 3,469 marriages in B.C. in 1971.

Rather, the commission feels the provincial government should provide family and parent education on marriage to all within the province's school system and special emphasis should be placed on teen-age marriages.

"There are several factors, characteristic of younger people, such as low levels of education, poor employment opportunities, physcological immaturity and pregnancy which decreases the chances of a successful marriage among teen-agers, the report says.

The commission avoided recommending a compulsory waiting period or other compulsory preparation before marriage. It said such requirements should be left to the wishes of individual religious denominations.

It did point out, however, that there has been a noticeable increase in the number of civil ceremonies.

All persons conducting education programs should have completed special training in the area of family life education, the commission chaired by Mr. Justice Tom Berger recommends.

Entitled Preparation For Marriage, the report also recommends that couples applying for marriage licences should be given a brochure which sets out information about legal, health, financial and parental aspects of marriage.

Information about family life resources should also be made available to the public and government financial support should be geared toward church and community-sponsored marriage preparation programs, standard setting and training of personnel.

Other recommendations include:

—An extension of hours and locations in which civil marriage ceremonies can take place.

—A new provision in the marriage act allowing a married couple to choose their respective legal names at the time of marriage.

—That marriage licences not be issued or marriages performed if either party to the intended marriage seems to be unable to appreciate the nature of the application to marry or the ceremony.

—That pre-marital medical examinations are advisable but not compulsory. The examinations should be covered by government health insurance.

Auto Rust 'Goodwill' Plan Stays

OTTAWA (CP) — Owners of late-model Fords who already have paid for rust repairs may still qualify for compensation under special "goodwill adjustment" programs operated by the company, Ford of Canada's national service manager says.

Larry Johnson said in an interview that in the five model years between 1970 and 1974, Ford Motor of Canada Ltd. has fixed free or on a partly-paid basis 10,000 cars that were rusted.. This cost the company about $2 million.

Ford has been under heavy fire from a Montreal consumer group, the Automobile Protection Association (APA), for its rust repairs program. The APA insists that the Ford payment plan was "a secret extension of the normal warranty" of 12 months or 12,000 miles.

After confidential documents from Ford of Canada's U.S. parent were made public that acknowledged "a serious vehicle rust problem" on 1969-73 models, the APA charged that Ford was keeping its repair programs secret.

One document showed Ford had spent, between 1971 and 1973 $24.8 million to repair rust and certain mechanical problems under 33 "extended policy programs." These programs provided for company-paid repairs after the normal warranty had expired.

GHOST TOWN

LUANDA (AP) — Nova Lisboa, Angola's second-largest city, was a virtual ghost town today as the last stragglers of an estimated 100,000 white refugees prepared to flee the fighting among rival black groups seeking control of Angola, scheduled for independence from Portugal Nov. 11.

Portuguese troops were also pulling out of the Nova Lisboa plateau area, once heavily white, and flying to Luanda, the coastal capital. Whites are soon expected to begin evacuating Luanda.

A Pan American World Airways jetliner, one of several planes that joined the month-long evacuation of Nova Lisboa refugees to Portugal, waited at the airport as United Nations workers brought five busloads of refugees in from outlying areas.

Cambridge Rapist Jailed for Life

NORWICH, England (Reuter)— Peter Cook, who dressed as a woman and pedalled a bicycle through the police-filled university city of Cambridge to rape seven women, was jailed for life today.

Sentencing the 47-year-old Cook, Justice Melford Stevenson said: "In the context of this case, life ought to mean life."

Many women were among court spectators who saw Cook plead guilty to charges of rape and two unlawful woundings between October, 1974, and June this year. The short, stocky truck driver showed no emotion when sentenced.

Cook, a master of disguises and meticulous planner, was the focus of one of the most bizarre stories in British criminal history.

For nine months he terrorized the city of Cambridge and its thousands of female students.

He threatened his victims with a knife and wore a black leather mask inscribed on the forehead with the word rapist.

Police never had evidence against him and actually questioned and cleared him along with 10,000 other men.

They caught him only by placing the whole 100,000 population of Cambridge in a state of tension.

In June of this year, a girl screamed in a small flat. Police got three emergency calls in seconds and froze the city, stopping every person and vehicle on the streets.

In a secret compartment in a hut near his caravan home police found 15 wigs, women's clothing, 100 stolen keys and two books.

One book recorded the addresses from which Cook had stolen the keys. The other listed 180 addresses and telephone numbers, the number of girls living at the addresses and the times they were usually at home.

Police said Cook, a married man, must have spent hours compiling this record by checking newspaper advertisements and watching outside the addresses.

Arsenic Dangers Denied

OTTAWA (CP) — There is no evidence that the public of Yellowknife, N.W.T., is being exposed to excessive or dangerous levels of arsenic from the city's two gold mines, the federal department of health said Friday.

It also said that while some Yellowknife miners were found to have slightly elevated levels of body arsenic, these levels "were nevertheless well below a toxic level.

"A widely held scientific opinion is that urine levels ranging from 0.7 to 1.0 milligrams do not represent an undue hazard for workers in an arsenic environment," said the department.

The department began testing Yellowknife residents after a CBC radio program broadcast allegations that the health of city residents was being threatened by excessive exposure to arsenic.

An independent study by the National Indian Brotherhood also indicated excessive exposure to arsenic.

Commercial-Free TV Not Top CBC Priority

VANCOUVER (CP) — A. W. (Al) Johnson, the new president of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, said Friday that he is not willing to relinquish $75 million in annual advertising revenue to provide Canadians with commercial-free television.

"I used to believe that Canadian television should be free of commercials," Johnson said in an interview. "But I think it is a very much more practical question."

Johnson, appointed Aug. 1 to a seven-year term as CBC president, said that he would rather retain commercials and use the revenue to improve programming.

"In my opinion, removal of commercials is a low priority in terms of improving programming and coverage," he said.

Johnson also said the CBC will continue to give high priority to establishing a station in Victoria using VHF channel 10.

In addition, the CBC may eventually develop a number of separate channels to meet regional demands, including a separate UHF station in the Pacific region, he said.

Vancouver will become an increasingly more important production centre for CBC English network programming, he said.

Johnson also said the corporation now is negotiating with the federal government to develop a five-or six-year plan, with real annual budget increases, to develop production and coverage.

Wash. Jobless Mock Red Tape

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — A theatre of the unemployed is working for free in front of the unemployment building, with unemployed actors using lampoons to spear bureaucracy for a chuckling audience of unemployment bureaucrats.

The loose-knit and non-professional cast opened its latest production one recent afternoon. It's called The Misadventures of Betty Lou Toughluck.

Hundreds of bureaucrats from top levels down assembled in a sunny plaza. They laughed when they, the politics of unemployment and bureaucracy in general, were satirized, sometimes none too gently.

The rough and ready sets are built on a fountain near the new highways administration building and, ironically, since the skit is about red tape and indignities heaped on the jobless, the employment security building forms a backdrop.

But perhaps most remarkably, the group is apparently completely spontaneous, and not supported by any organization, governmental, church or private. A hat-passing at the end of the performance netted more than $60 in contributions.

The play itself will probably never win any theatrical awards. But what the scripts lack in sophistication is made up by the verve of the cast and a generous sprinkling of music written by Carl Spaethe and played by Don Martin, Bill Knowles and Spaethe on clarinet, tuba and trombone. Martin also doubles as an unctuous and cigar-chewing secretary of labor when he isn't busy with the tuba.

There are plenty of jibes at bureaucrats and politicians both high and low and what the group obviously perceives as hypocrisy and oppression in dealing with the unemployed.

A high point is a rollicking and irreverent version of We're in the Money, sung and danced by the whole cast, as "money" is passed down from on high out of federal largesse.

And since all the youthful cast has been unemployed recently, the bureaucratic runarounds are portrayed with knowing cynicism.

Hovercraft Run Tops 4,000,000-Passenger Mark...

RAMSGATE, England (CP) — The company which uses hovercraft for voyages between this southeast England port and Calais in France carried its four millionth cross-Channel passenger this summer. Now it has plans for expanding the service.

The company is Hoverlloyd which operates three of the five largest hovercraft so far built in the Channel service.

The service linking Britain and France started with two craft in April, 1969, and before the end of that year Hoverlloyd had carried 310,000 passengers plus 40,000 cars in and out of its special hovercraft terminal at Ramsgate. This represented a five-percent share of the market for what were then 254-seater craft. By 1972, when a third machine was added to the service, the company had notched up its two millionth passenger and begun to make a profit.

Recently the Hoverlloyd craft have been widened to increase their capacity to 282 passengers and 37 cars. Last year they made a total of more than 5,000 cross-channel flights.

The extra width of the passenger cabin and other modifications are said to have given the craft a smoother ride. Reliability now is also well over 95 per cent and, it is claimed, is higher than that of many airlines. In August of last year the service carried its 500,000th car. This year at peak periods Hoverlloyd has been operating up to 40 flights a day.

British Hovercraft Corp., makers of the machines, recently revealed plans for a new generation of craft that will carry about 400 passengers and 60 cars with much lower operating costs.

Ignore the bumps and enjoy Fiji

The scenery is breathtaking, natives smile and wave at each curve of the road and, once you've embarked on Fiji's main artery known as the Queen's Road, you'd better smile, grit your teeth, and enjoy.

The 132-mile main link between Nandi, where we arrived via CP Air at its international airport, and the island nation's capital city of Suva, consists of massive potholes, hairpin curves and favorably compares with a B.C. logging road during spring breakup.

As one travel weary wag commented: "Why don't they put stirrups on these cars."

But what better opportunity for stopping off wherever you choose for a chat with the locals or taking photographs of the countryside that switches surprisingly from dense tropical jungle to sweeping sugar cane fields and palm-fringed beaches to peaceful rural settlements.

And the route takes in some of Fiju's major resort areas, including the luxurious Fijian Hotel, the tiny township of Sigatoka and, further on, the many miles of beaches known as the Coral Coast.

Already one of the top resorts, the Fijian lies past Momi Bay, across a man-made causeway leading to Yanuka Island. The setting is idyllic and travellers are welcome to stop off for lunch and a swim, or stay a few days.

A rewarding side trip at Sigatoka, midway between Nandi and Suva, is a drive along the Sigatoka River Valley, one of the richest agriculture areas in Fiji.

It offers excellent observation points from which to view the winding river, and patchwork fields of sugar cane, potatoes, peanuts, tobacco, passion fruit and other crops.

Sigatoka itself offers varied duty-free shopping to tourists and bargaining is a must items ranging from jewelry to stereo equipment or simple souvenirs.

A few miles on from Sigatoka is the Reef Hotel, previously known as the Reef Lodge before it underwent a $300,000 facelift involving major redevelopment of the beach and the building of new accommodation and a small shopping complex.

From here on, you are in the heart of the Coral Coast, with its scores of beach cottages and the Korelevu Beach Hotel where Fiji's famous firewalking ceremony is staged on the first Friday of every month.

Near the entrance to the Korelevu, you come to a little building. There is a sign out front with the words Jafau Woodcarving on it, and you've been told it's quite worthwhile stopping there.

You are greeted by Tom Biutuimua, a tall, handsome Fijian. You are asked to be seated and one of the craftsmen offers you yakona (kava), the national drink, in a half coconut shell.

Kava, made from the powdered root of a pepper plant, looks like liquid mud and has a pungent taste. It is not alcoholic but, if drunk in quantity, leaves the inside of the mouth with a numb feeling.

As the guest, you clap once before accepting it and then you drink it down without removing your lips from the shell and return it to your host. Each one claps again before the ceremony ends.

After chatting awhile, you are led into the next room where you marvel at the wood carving displays of masks, turtles, fish, faces, drums, oars, spears and many others. Prices vary from a turtle 6x8 inches for about $6 (Canadian currency) up to large masks and figurines for about $20.

Biutuimua says he has about 20 persons working for the Jafua Co-Operative Society, which was established in 1968. A worker can make from $12 to $25 a day, depending on the carving.

After a cheerful farewell, you continue on the next leg of your journey, which takes you past the Serua scenic lookout and on to Deuba, where more than 1,000 acres of coastal land is being developed into a multi-million dollar residential and resort complex.

Already completed is the 84-room Beachcomber Travelodge, an 18-hole golf course designed by Robert Trent-Jones and the first 40 luxury villas.

The 35-mile leg from Deuba to Suva twists through steep countryside providing breathtaking views of offshore islands and beaches.

On the outskirts of Suva, the hardtop begins and the weary motorist heaves a sigh of relief. Elapsed time for the 132 miles is about eight hours, including stops.

HONG KONG (CNS) — The name alone unleashes a cascade of colorful images.

Ivory toothpicks and jade rings. Tailored clothes and dried sea horses. Cymbals and gongs. Tonic teas, herbs and joss sticks. Rickshas and junks with red sails.

Spend a few days here and it all comes alive. And the longer you visit, the more kaleidoscopic and fascinating the place becomes.

A speck of hilly land on China's door, Hong Kong is a compact world the like of which you'll find nowhere else. It has been and still is the most popular destination in Asia.

Overtones of things English are in evidence. Hong Kong, after all, has been a British crown colony since the latter part of the last century. But 99 per cent of the more than four million who live here are Chinese, two-thirds of them refugees from the southern provinces of China.

It stands to reason that those millions, most of whom retain many of their native ways, fill every one of the colony's 400 square miles with their presence and fascinating life-style.

It adds up to a hole in the Bamboo Curain and, for the immediate future at least, the only place on mainland China open to most tourists.

Industry, dedication and politeness are characteristics often associated with the Chinese. You note all three everywhere, in the timeless rice paddies that dot the landscape beyond the skyscrapers and on to the Lo Wu Bridge, the border with the People's Republic, and right in the heart of Hong Kong.

Hong Kong, it should be noted, is made up of three separate parts: Kowloon and the New Territories, both on the Chinese mainland, and Hong Kong Island.

The New Territories take in the refugee cities, rice paddies and farmlands from Kowloon to the Chinese border, as well as many of the colony's 235 islands and islets.

Superb food and Chinese service are among those things you will long remember after a visit to Hong Kong. Surprisingly, both can be yours whether you are on a tight budget or not. There are thousands of restaurants and more than 10,000 hotel rooms, their prices varying from inexpensive to high. But even the "high" prices are, by and large, lower than those you find in major North American and European cities.

If you are fond of or interested in Chinese food you are in for a series of treats. The cuisine of Canton; the nearest mainland province, is well represented since that's where most of Hong Kong's residents originally came from.

But you'll also find the spicy-sour hot soup and bob bob chicken of Szechuan; tender crab and other specialties of Shanghai; Peking duck, and dishes from elsewhere in China.

And you can feast on European and North American meals, often prepared and served better than in their native lands. In fact, you can dine — as opposed to eat — better for less in Hong Kong than almost anywhere else in the world.

There are countless things to do in Hong Kong.

Take a junk to one of the ornate floating restaurants of Aberdeen. See a Chinese movie being made. Ride the tram to the top of Victoria Peak for one of the world's most fabulous views. Wander on foot through old Hong Kong.

Take a trip to Lok Ma Chau for a peek of the other side of the Bamboo Curtain. Sun yourself and swim at Repulse Bay or any of the many good beaches. Visit the night markets. Go by ferry or junk to the fishing village of Cheung Chau.

The list could go on and on, for this tiny world is but a wondrous series of sights and sites of unmatched fascination. But beware: Hong Kong is like a fine wine. After you discover it, you want to have another sip.

ABERDEEN on Hong Kong Island, above, is hill-bordered bay crowded with boat people living on sampans and superb floating restaurants. Below, crown colony is as colorful as signs which crowd its streets.

Tipping not needed on Copenhagen visit

By STAN DELAPLANE

COPENHAGEN — When Danes check into a hotel, the first thing they ask for is a dyne. (You say it "doonuh.") It's a comforter. Featherweight. Should be for it's stuffed with eiderdown. It almost floats on you. Warming you better than an electric blanket set to Tahiti temperatures.

"Funny thing," said the housekeeper in the Hotel Scandinavia, "North Americans just look at it and then call down and ask us to bring up 'some regular blankets.'"

We're in Denmark for a weekend. Not enough time to see Hamlet's ghost but that's the way it's set up by SAS airline and the Danish tourist people.

We've done 16 hours of flying over the Pole and cocktails begin immediately on arrival. (It's 6 p.m. by my home time and only a little sit-up sleep on a plane running with every seat filled.)

At Hotel Scandinavia they keep a fleet of free bicycles for guests. Copenhagen is a good walking town. Has something of a fairy story feeling. A convenient walking town but bicycling is the national transport. So we tried it.

There's NO tipping. A 15 per cent service charge goes on hotels, bars, bellhops, barbers, sauna attendants. You do NOT tip.

The 15 per cent service is passed on all over the Continent. But in Spain, France, Italy and so on, the server doesn't think 15 per cent does justice to your magnificent generosity. They expect a handful of change more.

Not so in Denmark and it's a relief. Struggling with tips in foreign money and a foreign language wears out your day.

First thing on arrival they pop you into a steamy sauna. Issue a towel made of sandpaper — it's supposed to send the blood coursing.

Big sailor town along the waterfront and you can get a permanent skin paint job of a ship in full sail at Tattoo Jack or Oley's Tattoo parlor. Many sailor stores with gear to outfit you in a hurricane.

Danes are feeling an inflation pinch. In this welfare state you could go forever without working. This means high taxes for the workers who find that taxes make it hardly worth it to work harder.

SAS runs full over weekends from New York, Los Angeles, Seattle, Chicago and feeder lines. Efficient service. They don't run to Barbie Doll stewardesses. Favor experience. If you can get to the airport and say "fasten seat belts" in five languages, you're in.

Denmark is pushing for outside tourist money. Offers a week in the country, air fare, hotels, country guest houses, a rent car with unlimited mileage.

TRAVEL TIPS

"I'm having some clothes made in Hong Kong. Will I pay duty? Expensive to ship?"

You pay duty if you ship those clothes even if you haven't used up your $100 free allowance on your return. Most Hong Kong tailors are sending clothes by air to Guam where brokers adapt the shipping cost to North American rates.

"What's the cheapest way to get around in Mexico?"

The bus has put Mexico on wheels and they're very, very cheap. The first-class buses running on the highways are OK — some of the newer ones are better than Greyhound.

But the second-class buses on back country roads are always crashing. And in Mexico — straight up and down — if you fall off a road in the pine trees you wind up eating bananas at the bottom. You couldn't get me on one with a pistol.

"We are planning to drive through Spain. Is it all right to stop by the wayside and picnic at noon?"

Sure. That's great picnic country. Pick a spot by a river so you can wash up. Have your hotel put up a lunch in the morning along with a bottle of wine. Put in a bottle of Solares water for drinking. Don't forget a knife with a corkscrew. And a rubber bottle stopper for the water.

"If this is what you get on a trip to Britain you're doing better than I am—and I live there!"

Lucky you. British Airways offers some fabulous "package" holidays to London and Europe.
Take our 22/45 day off-season return fare for example.
How does $12 a night sound?
Ask about British Airways' wide selection of Enterprise Charter Holidays to the Mediterranean area.
Do you know that for a price starting from about $230 you can spend a week in the sun.
And that's with return airfare from London, hotel and most meals included.
Or there's the famous British Airways one-week London Mini Show Tour. It's not just theatre tickets and a hotel, you know. All sorts of exciting extras are included as well.
And it can cost you as little as $83 on top of your airfare to London.
Just have a look at the brochure.
See your British Airways travel agent for all the facts and figures. And do tell him Roz sent you.
P.S. For full details about terms and conditions of booking, ask your travel agent for the London Show Tours brochure. And a couple of points about airfares in general: fares quoted are for departure in November through March and are subject to change.
It costs $15 extra each way to travel at weekends.
We'll take good care of you.
To Britain. Europe. The World.

First class: Luxury road to relaxation

By JOHN PHILIP SOUSA

HONOLULU (CNS) — This favorite tropical resort is a dandy place in which to practice the refined art of splurging.

You slave all year. Cut corners here, there.

You have tuna when you'd love a filet mignon. You carefully plot the trip home from the office so the stop at the market will not require a separate gas-wasting drive. And you take lots of other economizing steps.

Enough!

The point is: Penny-pinching month after month, wouldn't it be grand to pull all stops come vacation time?

All you have to do is upgrade — to use airline lingo — your vacation plans. Move them from economy to first class.

Step One. Forget about the 16-day, 16-city tour.

Step Two. Choose a spot you can get to — flying in first class of course — at a cost about half the price tag of the tour.

Step Three. Start talking to friends and co-workers about the things you absolutely have to take care of during your vacation. Relandscaping the yard will do. But looking for a weekend cabin by the lake is more effective.

What you are really after is a plausible reason to explain why you simply cannot use your entire vacation for travel.

This step is important because in order to have enough money to pay for a first-class fling you are going to have to trim the number of days away from home.

Again, figure about half as many days as the economy package. It's a case of going a shorter distance for fewer days but doing it better, doing it in style.

What I did was to compare the average two-week economy tour of Europe as priced for those of us who live on the West Coast with a first-class independent trip to Honolulu lasting one week.

As you might have gathered, Waikiki Beach won.

The two-week European thing hovered on the higher side of $1,000 without drinks or postcard money. And, of course, it would have entailed an overnight flight in a crowded economy-class cabin, group transfers and sight-seeing, mass feedings and other horrors.

What follows are the highlights of what I did for the same money — but in regal, first-class splendor.

I flew over aboard a comfy DC-10. The fare: $410 round-trip from California, first class. The flight was a joy. Almost nonstop food and drinks. Superb service.

After landing, I took a long Cadillac limousine — not a bus or taxi — to what would be home for a week here on Waikiki, the elegant Ilikai Hotel overlooking the famous and crowded, but nevertheless great, beach.

Surprisingly, rates compare favorably with those of resorts elsewhere in America and abroad. Ocean-view singles from $34, twins from $40 and suites starting at $85.

Thus, seven days in my sunny single room added up to just under $238, which coupled with the $410 air fare, totaled $648.

A daily average of $25 for meals (full dinner, light lunch and continental breakfast) added another $175 for a total of $823.

The Power Of Image

By PAT BARCLAY

"If tourists arrive at the border on a hot summer's day loaded down with furs and skis — and they have — it is because of what the movies told them about Canada. If Americans keep telling us 'you're the same as we are' — and they do — it is because the movies have convinced them of that fact! If Europeans are baffled when they reach our shores to find that most of us live in cities — and they are — it is because the movies have misled them. And if Canadians continue to hold the belief that there is no such thing as a national identity — and who can deny that many hold it? — it is because the movies have frequently blurred, distorted, and hidden that identity under a celluloid mountain of misconceptions."

The quotation is from Pierre Berton's introduction to Hollywood's Canada, the latest addition to the Berton canon and as insistently readable as all the rest. Some may argue that Hollywood's Canada is a non-book. So Hollywood's moviemakers chose to represent this country as a frozen wasteland peopled exclusively by diabolical French-Canadians, happy-go-lucky French-Canadians, villainous "half-breeds," lumbermen, prospectors, Hudson's Bay Company factors and RCMP named O'Malley; so what? Nobody ever accused tinsel town, L.A., of mistaking reality for popular entertainment. Besides, nobody in Hollywood makes movies about Canada anymore. It's a dead issue, revived only because Berton had some material left over from his history of the building of the CPR. And as we all know by now, Pierre Berton is not one to waste leftover material.

I even thought this way for a time myself, until Berton convinced me otherwise. After all, those Hollywood movies about Canada were no minor phenomenon; there were 575 of them, not counting documentaries, directed by people like D. W. Griffith, John Ford, Otto Preminger and, so help us, Alfred Hitchcock. The roster of stars included Madeleine Carroll, Paulette Goddard and Shirley Temple, Clark Gable, James Stewart and Errol Flynn, not to mention Rin-Tin-Tin and Rex the Wonder Horse. Granted there was a dreadful sameness about them; granted not one of them comes close to being a classic except as unintentional comedy; granted few Canadian critics objected to them at the time. Still, as Berton points out, "the only consistent impression of us that outsiders have received in this century has come from the motion picture," and that impression persists to this day, as Berton is able to prove.

Worse, our own conception of ourselves has been warped in the absence of any counterbalancing mass culture of our own. As Berton points out, our own government could not see past the blandishments of Hollywood lobbyists to the necessity of protecting a corner of the movie industry for Canadian filmmakers: "The idea of government control was seen as a semi-totalitarian measure . . . Canadian officials such as Donald Gordon, whose successful careers were based entirely on state-controlled enterprises (the Bank of Canada, the CNR), were opposed to state interference in the foreign-controlled motion picture industry. Our leaders, dazzled by the idea of untold publicity in the movies and buttered up by studio heads, were more concerned with paying homage to a free market and a free blow across the border . . . They didn't realize that the flow has always been one way."

Words such as these have become so familiar it's time they were set to music and sung as a final chorus to the national anthem. Berton complains at one point in his book that U.S. moviemakers saw Canadians as a nation of "primitives". Yet his own book reveals our politicians as Simple Simons consistently gulled by con artists from a more sophisticated mileu. Of all the myriad differences between "us" and "them" which Berton notes in his book, the simple Canadian faith in solemn promises made by cynical, materialistic men is the most pervading. Even when we know better, as weary RCMP commissioners often did, we were sometimes pressured into co-operating with the enemy by government officials who did not.

Probably the most interesting theory which Berton advances in Hollywood's Canada concerns one of the greatest con men of them all. How, Berton asks, did "a blue-eyed Scotsman named Archie Belaney fool an entire continent (and more) into believing that he was an Indian named Grey Owl?" Easy, says Berton. After all those movies featuring Hollywood's version of the Canadian Indian, nobody knew what a real Indian looked like. And he includes a photo of Lord Tweedsmuir in a Sioux head-dress to demonstrate that even the most unlikely people can resemble a Hollywood Indian, at the drop of a top hat.

I think that, far from indulging himself in a private enthusiasm, Pierre Berton has done Canadians a service in publishing Hollywood's Canada. In it he has shown, as conclusively as anyone is ever likely to, just how pervasive and enduring an invented, frequently reinforced image can be. He places factual accounts of events in our actual history alongside summaries of movie plots which not only distorted, but occasionally went so far as to reverse, those same events. And he proves, to my satisfaction at any rate, that people who persist in calling Canadian history "dull" are probably victims of too much Hollywood's Canada in their youth. Imagine nearly 600 movies, all with virtually the same plot! If that thought doesn't stir Canadian filmmakers into redeeming action, I don't know what will.

HOLLYWOOD'S CANADA: The Americanization of Our National Image, by Pierre Berton. McClelland and Stewart. $13.95.

According to Hollywood this is what the Mackenzie River country looks like in August. The totem pole belongs 1,000 miles to southwest, there shouldn't be any snow in a month when temperatures reach 90 degrees F. The movie is Back to God's Country, starring Rock Hudson, made in 1953.

Men in Search Of Themselves

By MARGARET MINTER

Just as William Dawe had set out in 1916 to search the Badlands of Alberta for dinosaur remains, Anna his daughter determines to find the charisma which lured him away from the comforts of home and the boring elegance of a rich wife.

Her decision to search out her namesake Anna Yellowbird, the Indian woman mentioned in her father's field notes, takes her to Gleichen, "a fading and sun-smashed town" on the edge of the Blackfoot Reserve. Anna, now old, dirty and beer-sodden, becomes her link with the past and her father's ill-fated journey.

BAD LANDS, by Robert Kroetsch. New Press. $4.95.

FRIGATE, by Martin Myers. General Publishing. $4.95.

Robert Kroetsch tells the story of Dawe and his companions in a series of flashbacks. Their escapades are hilariously funny, yet there is a poignant sadness at the seeming futility of it all, as if each in his own way had a desperate need to prove something.

The author, a native of Heisler, Alberta, is well qualified to write of the Red Deer Valley and his descriptions are masterful. But it is in character drawing that he really excels: Tune, the young teenager feeling the first stirrings of manhood; hump-backed Dawe himself with his feelings of inadequacy; Grizzly, the old Chinese who nobody understands; and Web, the most distinctive of all — hard, foul-mouthed and disgusting most of the time. The language throughout is raw and lurid in keeping with the characters and the situation.

Kroetsch, now writer-in-residence at the University of Calgary and Lethbridge, has several novels to his credit, among them Studhorse Man, which won the Governor-General's Award for fiction in 1969.

Whereas Dawe is searching for something buried deep in the past, Gilbert Frigate, the hero of Martin Myers' latest novel, is intent on finding his present and if possible his future.

After suffering the initial traumatic shock of being separated from his masculinity in such a sudden and inexplicable fashion, Gil the abbreviated moves from one ridiculous situation to another in his attempts to regain his whole being.

He becomes a major tourist attraction — busloads of interested spectators invade the privacy of his bedroom and it is small consolation to discover that he possesses miraculous powers of healing.

The book is of course symbolic and the author pokes fun at the frailties of man. Women's rights, homosexuality, medical practitioners and particularly religion all suffer a lot of good-natured criticism.

The story, such as it is, is loosely put together and the sequences do not always follow a logical pattern. Perhaps the author intended it that way, nevertheless the imagination and sense of humor behind such thinking are capable of greater things.

Myers, whose first novel, The Assignment, was a commercial success here and in the U.S., wrote Frigate while teaching creative writing at Scarborough College, University of Toronto. He has since returned to the world of advertising.

Stirring World for Bones

By TORCHY ANDERSON

When he died in October, 1972, it was said that Louis Leakey had pushed back the origin of man a million years. The story of this Kenya-born scientist is one of years of dusty research, long periods of discouraging scratching on hands and knees, picking out the tiny bones of ancient apes and the perpetual struggle for funds to keep going. But out of his dusty discoveries Louis Leakey stands as a lively human being with virtues and faults always dominated by an almost fanatical itch to prove a point.

He was born in Kenya, son of a pioneer British missionary. He married twice, each time to women who matched his own handsome person. He left two families. One son, Richard, was to parallel his father's work and add more countless years to man's estimate of when he began to leave imprints of two feet instead of four.

This Britisher regarded himself as a Kenyan. His grave lies in that country, where Kenyatta was to pay him a generous last tribute. Leakey was born among the Kikuyu. He spoke their language like a native and through world wars helped maintain the British colonial grip, without losing the regard and respect of his Kikuyu friends. Even the Mau Mau murders did not break that tie, although Leakey gave valuable warnings of plotted murders.

World scientists came into his dry, dusty headquarters at Olduvai where he and his second wife spent months of dusty, waterless searching for pre-history clues. It was said of him that he was "a bull searching for a china shop" and there were times when even his best friends had doubts about his methods. But those methods might be said to have led from entertainment to support of scientific research. There was always a struggle for funds. The National Geographic Society was his first big catch in the waters where he fished for funds.

His remarkable platform ability, a personality that was the extreme opposite to the traditional "learned professor," won him audience after audience, especially in the United States. The money that poured in always poured out in the search for ancient bones in the dry, hard land of giant crocodiles, deadly snakes and great hippos which persisted in bathing and urinating in the camp's only water supply.

His interests ranged from bones millions of years old to the live monkeys that ranged the forests fringing Lake Victoria. He encouraged Jane Goodall in her research of "chimps" and Dian Fossey in her lonely vigil with the great apes of today.

There are times in this remarkably well-illustrated book when the reader may wish that Sonia Cole, a scientist herself, would spare some of the detail. But always the Leakey story comes back to the vital interest that he stirred in the world, scientific and otherwise.

One cannot but wonder if he ever pondered, not on man's past, but his future.

Fictional Zip Around New York

By LEONARD RUSSO

How long has it been since you've read a really good novel? You know the kind: one that keeps you up all hours of the night, or sends you off into a quiet cubbyhole every available moment — "Don't bug me, world, I'm reading a sensational book!"

I had this feeling after reading the first 100 pages of The Understudy. I was rapt up and engrossed. The writing was quick, zippy, and the characters were just superb.

THE UNDERSTUDY, by Elia Kazan. McGraw-Hill. $9.95.

First, there's Sidney. He's an aging, has-been actor, and well . . . you know how it is with that type. Bitchy. Senile. Monstrously decadent. Completely unequipped to step down from the stage into the real world.

Most of Sidney's days are spent trying to drum up money for The Titan, an unproduced play, a bombshell that promises to make over-the-hill Sidney a celebrity again. Trouble is nobody's buying it.

Next there's Sonny, a younger actor whose star is rising. He's got a couple of problems, though. The main one is washed-up Sidney, whom he feels guilty about. Another is his wife, who's nagging him to leave New York (the city frightens her). Still another is his stepson who never says a word to him.

Sonny's wife Ellie has a couple of troubles of her own. A sensitive ex-lover, run down by a mailtruck, for one. And a divorced first husband, who visits his son and reminds mother how rotten and unsafe New York is, for another.

If somehow these characters don't sound all that intriguing, listen to what happens in the novel.

First, in his attempt to drum up money, Sidney falls in with the underworld. This upsets friend Sonny somewhat, especially when the cops start calling. Meantime, Sonny's jittery wife Ellie has started taking jujitsu lessons for self-protection.

All this makes Sonny feel suddenly impotent, literally and otherwise, so he skips off to Africa for a vacation. Upon his return, things get even worse. Sidney, obsessed with making a comeback, is out-of-whack altogether. Ellie, whose jujitsu hasn't saved her from being mugged, issues a marital ultimatum. Worst of all, by a freak of events, Sonny becomes the wild card in a police investigation.

Despite everything, the show must go on . . . and it does, of course. But the novel falls flat on its face in the final act. The way author Kazan resolves his characters' interlocking predicaments is downright corny. Sidney dies. Success strikes. And Sonny and Ellie ignore each other to live happily ever after. Sort of, anyway.

Smart readers will find the outcome of the novel a letdown, but this doesn't mean the book isn't worth a go. Kazan has New York down pat. Funerals for dead cops at St. Patrick's. Pigs-in-blankets and cheese spreads at hotels. Muggers who scream at victims who get away: "Another time, baby."

This is how it goes in the city of New York and Kazan has it so jam-packed into this novel that its disappointing ending becomes almost insignificant.

Bellow: Fun and Philosophy

By JACK SCOTT

Then there are life's beautiful losers. The dispossessed of so much in modern literature, their lives of anxieties and unrewarded soul-searching very often make more compelling reading than the sagas of the heroic.

A case in point: Saul Bellow's eighth novel, "Humboldt's Gift." Here is a big, loose engrossing entertainment of fun and philosophy about an aging writer who, in the caustic words of his mistress, spends his life "trying to dope your way out of the human condition." It is a story of the intellectual life. Yet it will establish a strong bridge of identity with every reader.

HUMBOLDT'S GIFT, by Saul Bellow. Macmillan. $11.50.

The main character, one Charlie Citrine, may just be the most endearing in the gallery of rogues and saints created by America's most enduring novelist.

He is a neurotic and emotional worrier, haunted by the inevitability of death and, in his late 50s, the fear of age and a waning of his sexual ability, charged with an irrational loyalty to even the most undeserving friend, victimized by almost everybody, yet somehow never anything less than a valiant loser.

Bellow, himself, now 60 and clearly at the height of his powers, has described it as "very much a comic book about death." It is an accurate description. Charlie Citrine's failing attempts to come to terms with his fate, his groping for even an occult rationale through reincarnation (he is a student of Rudolf Steiner's now-forgotten creed of anthroposophy that promised the transmigration of souls) is, perversely, an instrument of sympathetic laughter in Bellow's magical prose.

SAUL BELLOW . . . height of powers

Charlie becomes not merely a plaintive, weak-willed man, desperately proud of his doctor's periodic report on his "amazingly youthful prostate" or his occasional calisthenics on a Posturopedic mattress with Renata, his pneumatic and elegant symbol of immortality (who, in turn, shafts him mercilessly), but a lovable, even noble figure.

No less a quixotic, doomed character through these 500-odd rollicking pages is the ghost of Von Humboldt Fleisher, a fallen poet of the 1930s whose talents and style simply grew out of fashion, said to be the author's portrait of Delmore Schwartz, a little-remembered poet whose influence on Bellow was similar to that of Humboldt on Citrine.

Humboldt is, himself, a magnificent loser in life, a man whose eloquence, philosophy and manic, non-conformist behavior are hallowed in Citrine's restless memory.

Humboldt's gift from the grave, his legacy to a disciple he, too, has rejected, is a strange and satiric film script that he and Charlie have written purely for their own amusement. Its success, at a time when Citrine's ex-wife has him broken with lawsuits and when he has come to a standstill in his own lucrative career, is as happy an occasion as any rescue of Pauline from the rails.

In what has seemed Bellow's most exuberant, undisciplined novel, it has a cohesive effect, one more reminder that, as much as any contemporary writer, he is the consummate craftsman. That a book which could easily have been mired in philosophical meanderings should be so altogether delightful, cover to cover, is just one more reminder of his attitude and his gifts as a writer.

It may not be that this is the most memorable of Bellow's works, perhaps not in the category of his unforgettable 1956 novel, "Seize the Day," but there have been few recent works so mature, so innovative or so gently funny.

Coming Up: Spectacles and Stars

By JUDY KLEMESRUD

NEW YORK — For film buffs weary of sharp-teethed sharks and the "Nashville" sounds, relief is in sight. The new season's offerings range from a comedy-drama that stars Liza Minnelli as a frowzy 1930's rum runner to a crime caper with Al Pacino as a homosexual bank robber. The upcoming films fall into several categories:

The Spectacles. George C. Scott and Anne Bancroft star in "The Hindenburg" which details the events leading up to the explosion of the giant German zeppelin in nearby Lakehurst, N.J., in 1937. William Atherton, who played the screenwriter in "The Day of the Locust," co-stars as a German saboteur, and the cast includes Burgess Meredith, Roy Thinnes and Charles Durning.

Malcolm McDowell, best remembered as the man with electrodes on his gorgeous blue eyes in "A Clockwork Orange," is back as Captain Harry Paget Flashman of the 11th Hussars, a swashbuckling scoundrel and seducer of damsels in Richard Lester's "Royal Flash." The movie is based on George McDonald Fraser's series of Flashman novels, and the cast includes Alan Bates, Oliver Reed and Britt Ekland.

In "Midway," Charlton Heston almost single-handedly defeats the Japanese in that epic World War II battle, with some help from Robert Mitchum, Henry Fonda and Glenn Ford, and no help from John Wayne, who stayed home this time.

In "The Man Who Would Be King," based on Kipling's classic adventure story, Sean Connery and Michael Caine star as soldiers of fortune who try to set themselves up as kings of a primitive country. John Huston directs their efforts.

Later in the season, Connery returns as Robin Hood in "Robin and Marian," with Audrey Hepburn as Maid Marian, in Richard Lester's film about the latter days of those two lovers. Robin comes home from the Crusades to find that Marian is an abbess. What to do? The cast includes Robert Shaw, Nicol Williamson and Richard Harris.

It's been a long time in the making, as they say, but "The Blue Bird" is now promised for some time in the spring. Based on the fairy tale by Maurice Maeterlinck, this joint Russian-American production stars Elizabeth Taylor, Jane Fonda, Ava Gardner and Cicely Tyson, with George Cukor behind the megaphone.

The Director's the Thing. Stanley Kubrick, who hasn't been seen or heard from since "A Clockwork Orange," returns with a swashbuckling 18th-century drama, "Barry Lyndon," starring Ryan O'Neal in the title role and Marisa Berenson as his love interest. The film is based on the novel by William Makepeace Thackeray.

Britain's bad boy, Ken Russell, will be represented this season by "Lisztomania," his rather eccentric view of the life of composer Franz Liszt, played by Roger Daltrey, of "Tommy," with Ringo Starr as the Pope.

And New York's Martin Scorsese takes another look at Manhattan's mean streets in "Taxi Driver," the story of a cabbie-turned-assassin. It stars Robert De Niro and Cybill Shepherd.

Women Are Making It. Elaine May's third film, "Mikey and Nicky," long in the works, is expected around Christmas. It's the story of two men in the underworld (played by Peter Falk and

McDOWELL
. . . as Flashman

Italy's Lina Wertmuller, regarded by some as the world's finest women film director, will be represented by "Swept Away By an Unusual Destiny in the Blue Sea of August," the story of a rich woman and a poor steward who are shipwrecked on an island together. And then the class struggle breaks out. It stars Giancarlo Giannini and Mariangela Melato, who also appeared in Miss Wertmuller's "Love and Anarchy" and "The Seduction of Mimi."

One of the few "women's films" of the season is "Legacy," the story of the crack-up of an upper-class woman (Karen Arthur), stars a woman (Joan Hotchkis, who also wrote it), and was made through a women's co-operative film group.

Another woman, Joan Micklin Silver, directed "Hester Street," the story of Russian Jewish immigrants living on the Lower East Side in 1896. It stars Carol Kane as a wife who is having problems assimilating, and Steven Keats as her impatient husband.

The Stars Shine. Liza Minnelli, who won an Oscar in 1973 for "Cabaret," and then forsook firlms for the real cabaret circuit, returns to the screen in "Lucky Lady," Stanley Donen's movie about rum-runners off the coast of Mexico in the 1930s. Her partners in crime: Burt Reynolds and Gene Hackman.

Jack Nicholson as a psycho? Yes, in "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest," based on Ken Kesey's novel about a con man in an insane asylum. After leading a revolt of the other patients, Nicholson finds himself in an unpleasant situation: he is lobotomized.

John Wayne and Katharine Hepburn, together for the first time? Yes, in "Rooster Cogburn," sequel to "True Grit." He plays the prickly U.S. marshal with the black eye patch; she's a Bible-toting spinster. Any bets as to who rides off into the sunset together?

Richard Dreyfuss, who will probably always be thought of as Duddy Kravitz, returns as an offbeat, Orson Welles-type young film director of the 1930s who goes to pieces and winds up making porno flicks. The film is called "Inserts."

Glenda Jackson has two new movies this season: Joseph Losey's "The Romantic Englishwoman," about a marriage (with Michael Caine) on the rocks, and "The Devil Is a Woman" in which she plays a nun with strange powers. And last but not least, especially at the box office is America's favorite homely actor, Charles Bronson, who has three films coming up: "Hard Times," in which he plays an unemployed man during The Great Depression; and "Showdown at Breakheart Pass" and "From Noon Until Three," both westerns.

Thrillers. In "Three Days of the Condor," Robert Redford, America's favorite handsome actor, is a C.I.A. reader-researcher who inadvertently becomes involved in murderous activities within his own agency. Faye Dunaway helps him stay alive.

James Caan has similar survival problems with three freelance assassins who are gunning for him in Sam Peckinpah's "The Killer Elite." The movie's distributor promises "lots of martial arts." Bruce Lee lives!

Burt Reynolds, who is running the risk of overexposure this season, plays a detective who is living with a high-priced hooker (Catherine Deneuve) in "Hustle," Robert Aldrich's film about the search for the murderer of a teenage girl.

And the master himself, Alfred Hitchcock, will be heard from with "Family Plot," his first film since "Frenzy." The plot of "Family Plot" is convoluted as that of most Hitchcock films, involving a medium (played by Barbara Harris), a kidnapping and a diamond heist. Karen Black and Bruce Dern also star.

The Funnies. Quirky Gene Wilder wrote, directed and starred in "Sherlock Holmes' Smarter Brother," which also features Madeline Kahn. Wilder plays Sigerson Holmes, who is wildly jealous of his sleuth brother, Sherlock. The plot involves a plot against Queen Victoria.

Dour-faced Elisha Cook, Jr. was one of the most memorable villains in the 1941 hit "The Maltese Falcon"; now he's back in a comedy spoof of that film, "The Black Bird," with George Segal as Sam Spade's son. Stephane Audran and Lionel Stander co-star.

Dare to be a Daniel!

One of the hazards of having passed middle life is the suspicion that you are allowing the values of your developmental period to prejudice your view of current modes and attitudes.

The comfortable thing, I suppose is to say, "I may be old fashioned but I don't care." And stick to your viewpoint.

But one should care and be suspicious of instinctive reactions.

It is not difficult to form the habit of examining each issue purely on its merits and not in the light of earlier concepts Some will call this leaning over backwards to be "with it"; but there's nothing wrong with that so long as one preserves a true and balanced sense of values.

Every generation creates its fads and fashions. It may not have occurred to the present young generation that in 30 years' time they will find their own ideas being discarded with the same contempt they have meted out to ours.

However, I believe it necessary to be on guard against too much lenience — against being intimidated to a point where one fears to speak out on certain issues.

"The person who cannot be offended and disgusted by anthing — particularly by anything labeled avant-garde art — is no longer a person."

That is a remark by Eric Bentley, Anglo-American critic and stage director, who also states that the time has come for the person of pure vision to say forthrightly "that the emperor of the avant-garde is naked."

Commentator Grace Lichtenstein, writing in the New York Times a couple of years ago, said: "You are supposed to be capable of being offended and disgusted and if you dislike being put to such straits then you are intimidated by the fear of being regarded as reactionary, out-of-date, even approaching senility."

She continued, commenting particularly on the "repulsive ugliness" of (rock star) Alice Cooper, that "art has been attacked by a wave of decadence . . . the only hope is that when we have wallowed long enough in the sewers that the only way out is up."

Taken out of context these statements probably seem too wholesale a condemnation, and so they are. There is much art in all media today that is stimulating and haunting as well as innovative; much in which one can recognize lasting values.

And whether you are looking at a modern painting or piece of sculpture, attending a new play for film or listening to contemporary music, it is the real value beneath the idiomatic expression for which one must search.

Art is said to exist where some statement is made, some fresh vision brought to bear on life, human conditon, the world around us.

But many good things have nothing profound to say; they simply are made up of original ideas, humorous invention and taste.

They may belong in the category of escapism but that in itself makes such books, stage shows, music and films, valuable artifacts. In the sort of world we have created escape in some form is essential if we are to keep our balonce.

★ ★ ★

What is trash then? My definition would be that which appeals only on one level of human response, and that the basest.

I can think of no better example than the current runaway popular movie, Jaws. Or to cite another, The Exorcist.

Both these hit movies are, in my opinion, garbage. Both were made from books that have no value other than sensationalism even though, in the case of Exorcist, there was some religious acceptance. Both were intended to create shock waves and did so, as books and on the screen.

★ ★ ★

Aside from some highly skillful technical gimmickry Jaws specific appeal is to those who enjoy revelling in gory detail. Gore and violence are in the mood of our time and too much with us in our world of entertainment.

I am offended and disgusted by books such as those mentioned — by any book, stage show or film created for no purpose but to titillate the morbidly curious and the thrill-seeker.

And while proclaimng myself unintimidated, I'll go all the way and state that I loathe most serial music, the hideous fad for super-amplified sound, the monotony of country and western and rock beat — and freaks like Alice Cooper.

Soviet-Canada Space Links

TOYKYO (Reuter) — Canadian Science Minister Bud Drury said today that Canadian and Soviet space officials have discussed the possibility of space co-operation between the countries.

Drury, on a four-day visit to Japan, told a news conference that "very tentative" discussions took place about five weeks ago with Soviet officials accompanying Russian cosmonauts visiting Canada.

"I would like to have a look at the prospects for co-operation with them for launching prospects," Drury said.

Al Green: A Limp Relaxation

By DAVE MARSH

ROLLING STONE

Al Green has always been a master of the understated ballad. He never seems to exert himself much, but his grace and the latent power of his voice — only rarely demonstrated — never fail to impress. Listening to him is almost always a purely aesthetic, rather than visceral, pleasure. His new album Al Green is Love, is perfectly organized, but Green's relaxation has become so pervasive that he nearly disappears. In the best sense, the Hi Records rhythm section, particularly drummer Howard Grimes, can be said to dominate this record; they provide its chief pleasures, and the music they play, if not innovative, is close to perfection of the soul form. Green's problem is that his voice is merely another instrument here; he isn't given a single song to break the pattern, and although the musical constructions are exquisite, they lack the focus an interesting lyric — or the taking of a few chances by the singer — might offer. If Green remains the greatest voice in contempoary soul, he also remains the music's chief enigma. More albums like this one, however, are more likely to dull than whet our curiousity.

GREEN

* * *

J. Geils' seventh album Hotline, might as well be their second, or their eleventh. It merely reiterates the loose, partying blues format of all of their others. Or all of their others save one, Ladies Invited; that record, probably their best, was a commercial disaster, and apparently its lack of sales forced a failure of nerve on the group's part. But having written an album of relatively restrained, mature rock songs, Geils have returned to the boogie fold without any real conviction, and in music as casually structured as this, conviction is everything. Even the inclusion of the usual trio of lost classics — "Love-itis," "Orange Driver," "Be Careful (What You Do)" — can't rescue them now.

* * *

Jackie De Shannon has decided to become a full-force singer-songwriter, sort of like Joni Mitchell without the pomposity. Her first foray in the mode, New Arrangement, is a thorough success, from the love songs (particularly the title track and "Over My Head Again") to her vignettes of the classic movie era ("Bette Davis Eyes," and her hard-boiled cop song, "Murphy"). This album is the sleeper of the major record company's fall releases.

* * *

If Al Green is slipping in stature, Angelo Bond might be the man to replace him in the affection of those of us who love tenor soul singers. Bond is a good songwriter, particularly on "Reach for the Moon (Poor People)" and "He Gained the World (But Lost His Soul)", and his musical sensibility is, fittingly for a Detroit kid, closer to Motown than anything else. A promising — although flawed by production gaffes — debut.

Musical comedy in French

The first French musical comedy to be written and staged by British Columbians will be seen at Newcombe Auditorium Saturday, Oct. 11.

Climb Aboard, We Won't Go Fast, concerns the disappearance of a bus in Vancouver before the eyes of an astonished crowd. The author is Therese Champagne, a recent arrival in Vancouver.

The amusing musical play will be presented for the pleasure of both Francophiles and Francophones by La Troupe de la Seixieme, under the auspices of Le Club Canadien Francais and Le Centre Socio-Culturel Francais de Victoria.

Curtain time is 8 p.m. and tickets will be available at the door.

Before The Judge

A 23-year-old bookkeeping clerk pleaded guilty in Victoria provincial court Friday afternoon to stealing $540 from her employer over the past four months.

Linda Maureen Weston of 3131 Cedar Hill Road was arrested Friday noon after police found five marked $20 bills in her purse, part of a deposit she was to have placed into her employer's bank account that morning.

Prosecutor Mrs. Barry Riseborough said the accused had worked for Price's Lock and Safe Ltd., 847 Fort, since May 12 and that since June 1 the company has noticed shortages in its deposits.

Mrs. Riseborough said the company was unable to give an exact figure of the amount missing but had estimated the shortage in excess of $3,000.

The accused also pleaded guilty to possession of marijuana.

The crown said a small amount of the drug was found in Weston's purse by police who searched her after bringing her into the station for questioning on the theft matter.

When police asked her if she had any more she replied she had and took officers to her home where 65 rolled-up marijuana cigarettes were found in her bedroom.

Judge Harold Alder released the accused in her own recognizance in the sum of $500 and remanded her to Oct. 24 for a pre-sentence report and sentencing.

A 10-month jail sentence was given to Tyler John Sloan, 21, of no fixed address after he pleaded guilty to possession of stolen property under $200 and breach of probation.

Sloan had originally been charged with the Sept. 16 robbery of a woman in her home at 940 Bay. However, the crown withdrew that charge.

A second person accused in connection with the robbery, William Bruce Tucker, address not known, pleaded guilty and was remanded to Oct. 27 for a pre-sentence report.

Police said Tucker went to the home of Mrs. Alice Celia Sloan at about 6:10 p.m. and, brandishing a knife, said he wanted money "to get out of town."

Mrs. Sloan said she would give him some money if he put away the knife, which he did.

She handed him an envelope containing about $60 and he ran off.

Police said Sloan was waiting outside and the two accused went to the Quadra Street school where they split the loot.

In sentencing Sloan, Alder said he would recommend the accused serve out his time at the Alouette River camp so that Sloan might be able to receive therapy for an alcohol problem.

The couple, who pleaded guilty, was charged July 31 when police searched their residence at 1744 Bay and found 45 marijuana plants growing on the front porch. A hookah and two hash pipes were also seized.

Pleading guilty to possession of marijuana also brought $75 fines for Marina Hudson, 19, of 1454 Begbie and Robert Gary Trowsdale, 21, of 2849 Cedar Hill Road.

★ ★ ★

A man who was seen ripping the receiver off a pay phone in the 400 block Menzies Sept. 26 was fined $25 and ordered to make restitution in the maount of $30.50 to B.C. Telephone.

★ ★ ★

In Judge William Ostler's court Harold Murray Sanford, 57, no fixed address, was sentenced to one day in jail and fined $400 for passing a forged cheque in the amount of $285, at the Half Way House, 856 Esquimalt Aug. 28. He pleaded guilty.

★ ★ ★

"Sorry Ma'am, I'll have to ask you for your purse or I'll stab you."

With that introduction Louise Ann Carson, 17, address not known, robbed a 62-year-old woman in front of the legislature buildings Sept. 21, prosecutor Nick Lang said.

The accused pleaded guilty to the charge.

Lang said the victimized woman protested she had only $5 but the accused grabbed it and ran off. She was arrested a short time later behind the Empress Hotel, and found to be in possession of the money and a small pocket knife.

Green remanded the case to Oct. 28 for a pre-sentence report.

Arbutus Crafts Fair Set

The handicapped of Arbutus Crafts Association will be holding its first Village Fair next week and the association president says he hopes it will become an annual affair.

"The handicapped out at Arbutus are really excited about this undertaking and are working hard to make it a success," said Derek Dashwood.

The display and sale of crafts and wares made by the physically disabled will be held in the Mayfair shopping mall during the week of Oct. 6 to 11. The handicapped will be at the mall to operate their looms and to work at their basket weaving, handicrafts and woodowrk. Hours will be from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. daily and on Thursdays and Friday from 10 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Space at the mall has been made available to Arbutus by the Mayfair Merchants Association and to show their appreciation, Dashwood said, the handicapped are handcrafting a three-foot by seven-foot Thanksgiving horn of plenty for Mayfair.

Arbutus, a non-profit association with workshops at 4353 West Saanich Road, which provides work for about 80 physically handicapped people, will also be holding a fund-raising membership drive at the mall.

"Until now, Arbutus membership has been limited to those directly involved with the association — the handicapped, their friends and relatives and volunteers," said Dashwood.

"It is hoped that through this fund-raising membership drive, we can expand the base of membership to include the community at large," he said, adding that persons who take out membership will have voting privileges at the annual meetings.

"For instance, we need silk screen designers, instructors, people to drive the disabled to and from the workshop . . .

Theatre Arts Program Set For Camosun

A full enrolment of 16 students is beginning work in Camosun College's third season of the theatre arts program.

The space problem that loomed last spring has been solved by Bastion Theatre's sharing of its studios in the Maritime Museum Building on Bastion Square.

All three of program director Maurice Harty's first-year students are now working in the theatre professionally. Among them is Tom Day, Bastion's assistant stage manager.

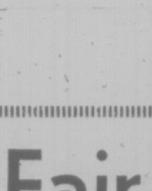
Government Aid Crucial for Athletes



elizabeth forbes

Jim Panton has been an outstanding athlete. At University of Saskatchewan and University of Washington, he was a winner in track and field and on the basketball floor.

In 1938 he earned a silver medal for Canada at the British Empire Games.

So it was natural when the Community Recreation Branch of the B.C. Department of Travel Industry was formed in 1953, that he would be named to head that branch and to direct its progress.

Today, although the work has more than doubled, the name changel to Leisure Services Branch, the base moved to the provincial secretary's department and an office established on Fort Street,near Cook, Panton tells you proudly he is still working with "exactly the same number of staff" he started with 22 years ago.

These include nine field men who act as recreation consultants, a fitness and amateur sports co-ordinator, a drama adviser, plus a small office staff.

"Expansion is coming now," he told me the other morning, direct result of the findings of Dr. Eric F. Broom, who did a study on leisure service about a year ago.

Recommendations from that study resulted in Dr. Broom being named an associate deputy minister of leisure service in the provincial secretary's department.

"It also saw the name of our branch changed," Panton said, "and with the change we will be able to work closely with Dr. Broom."

I went to see the leisure service director because I had read of the tremendous success our British Columbia athletes had at the Western Canada Games in Regina, and I was curious to know how those young athletes reached this degree of excellence and where they were haded now.

When I asked those questions, Panton sat back in his chair, thought a moment and then suggested the B.C. government, through the leisure services branch, had much to do with it.

He said: "For some years now, we have been providing sports governing groups throughout the province with annual grants to help develop many different sports, and naturally some part of those grants has been used to help develop excellence."

As examples of this type of funding he spoke of a 1974 grant of $22,000 to the B.C. Amateur Basketball Association "to develop that sport."

Soccer in the province received the same amount last year. Figure skating was given a grant of $25,000. Tennis which is making a comeback has also been helped, as have many other sports throughout the province.

Promising young athletes, winners in British Columbia, who entered competition in other provinces were eligible for travel grants, too.

"Here you have an upgrading through higher competition," Panton said.

At this point he jumped up to show me the aggregate achievement shield won by British Columbia at the Western Canada Games.

Saskatchewan hosted those games which were open to the four western provinces. The federal government provided travel grants and each province equipped its own team.

"It was a miniature Olympics," Panton explained. "Our athletes were outstanding and through their excellence, British Columbia's name is the first on this shield."

The word "Olympics" brought me to another question. What are we doing in connection with the Olympic games next year? Are we training our athletes to compete in Montreal?

"Obviously in these pre-Olympic years, some of the grant money I have told you about will have been used to assist and develop Olympic prospects," Panton answered.

He also explained that in the past two years, our province, with all the others, has been involved in Games Plan '76.

This is a program sponsored by the Canadian Olympic Games Association and designed to provide additional assistance to potential Olympic competitors.

For instance, through the plan, three or four topnotch skiers might be sent from here to a special clinic in eastern Canada, Panton explained. Outstanding volleyball players might attend a national volley-ball camp somewhere out of the province.

"The same opportunity is available to other outstanding athletes in any number of our sports."

Through Games Plan '76, British Columbia has already contributed $27,000 in the past two years.

The leisure service branch also helps athletes to attend Canada's summer and winter games which alternate every other year.

It looks, therefore, as if we will have some excellent athletes competing in the Olympic Games at Montreal next year.

So let's get behind them. Give them our moral support . . . and stop beefing about the cost of the games and the possibility of ending up in the red.

A REMINDER — The Women's Action Coalition will hold an informational meeting Monday at 8 p.m. in the Women's Centre, 552 Pandora Avenue, at which representatives of 125 women's groups invited to join a march to the Legislative Buildings on October 25, may ask questions and gain answers.

The march is planned in co-operation with women's groups across Canada, to point at government failures to bring about reforms in Internatinal Women's Year.

October 25 has been designated by the United Nations as a day in which governments will sum up any achievements during IWY.

GIRLS HAVE A RUN AT THE STORK BANK

MOUNT CARMEL, Ill. (UPI) — Around Wabash General Hospital, they're beginning to wonder if the stork has run out of boys.

The last boy arrived Sept. 8. Since then, there have been 20 births, all of them girls, including 18 in September and two in October.

Mrs. Louise Williams, secretary to the hospital administrator, says the nurses in obstetrics say the hospital has never had such a run on girls and they don't know of any other place that has.

Doing the Town

With DOROTHY FRASER

Plums for the picking! . . .

As usual, they're not shouting it from the rooftops . . . but WE'RE telling you about it now . . . and if you're half as smart as we think you are, you'll be down at Eaton's quick like a bunny when they open for business this coming Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday! . . . You see, Eaton's "small shops" . . . (Import Room, Townhouse and Coach House, . . . are having one of their famous clearing sales . . . the sort of sale that well-dressed women . . . with more clothes sense than cash . . . watch out for so eagerly . . . Behind the scenes this week we were shown some of the things which will go on sale Oct. 6-7-8, . . . at reductions in some cases less than half price! . . . But everything is very substantially reduced . . . enough to make the trip downtown well worth while . . . We saw quite a bit of Jaeger co-ordinated sportswear . . . cardigans, pullovers, blouses . . . A couple of short white wool Jaeger coats . . . A few wool dresses and suits . . . Quite a number of summer dresses, skirts and blouses . . . along with raincoats, some long dresses and skirts, and other odds and ends . . . Not to mention a big selection of other sportswear . . . These are mostly summery things . . . so if you're holiday bound this winter you're in luck because you'll be able to pick up some stunning things for a mere song! . . . Eaton's Import Room, 382-7141. loc. 242.

A selective group of exclusive shoes . . .

There's a small Italian shoe factory in Florence . . . Vittorio Petrini by name . . . whose entire output is sold to Saks Fifth Avenue, Neiman-Marcus, and a few other prestigeous retailers . . . among whom are . . . guess who? . . . our own Munday's! . . . This week Mr. Munday showed us his small, very selective group of Vittorio Petrini shoes . . . and all we can say is they're completely beautiful! . . . The very embodiment of quality, craftsmanship and elegant styling! One model with a low-ish heel and high vamp, has a narrow trim of gilt metal around the toe and top of heel . . . Tan or navy kid, and black patent in this . . . A dressy pump with a little higher heel has a narrow instep strap and slightly squared toe . . . Black calf with black patent toe cap as well as in camel with brown patent tip . . . Same height of heel on a black kid T-strap with grey collar, strap and stitching . . . A pretty shoe . . . Finally, two smart suit shoes with stack leather heels . . . One very attractive one in brown suede with rust piping and stitching . . . the other in brown calf with black piping and little gold ornament . . . These Petrinis . . . priced from $58 to $63 . . . are largely hand-made . . . and so blissfully comfortable that women who bought them last spring are coming back for more! . . . Munday's, 1203 Douglas St., 383-2211.

Don't wait till the snow starts flying! . . .

"Duffle, duffle, my kingdom for a duffle!" . . . you'll probably be moaning before too long if you're waiting till the last minute to get yours! . . . You know, they come from England . . . somewhat sporadically . . . And to spring another cliche . . . he who hesitates may have to wait a long, long time for a new shipment! . . . Charmante's is one store which still has a good selection of duffle coats from which to make your selection . . . Price-wise, they start at $70 . . . for the unlined duffles in red, off-white and emerald . . . Go up to $115 for the finer quality camel coats with white lining . . . brown or camel with plaid linings . . . And for $75 you can own a duffle coat in a nice neutral fawn, grey or that pretty airforce blue . . . Don't, for goodness sake, wait too long though . . . or you just might find that you can't get the color and quality you want in the right size! . . . Charmante's have a very good selection of winter overcoats too . . . both untrimmed and fur trimmed (noticed a particularly smart black one with mink collar which would look Great on a shorter person . . . Sizes from 8 all the way up to 20 at a . . . Charmante's, Hillside Shopping Centre, 595-1555.

As far as we're concerned, Alladdin can KEEP his cave . . . us, we'd settle for de Goutiere's any day . . . and what's more, you don't need any magic words to get in! . . . Seeing as how this is October, we'll tell you first about the lovely little tear-shaped opal pendant surrounded with deeply-glowing garnets, suspended on a slender gold chain . . . There's a pair of matching earrings for this . . . And two gold rings set with black opals . . . very fine stones, full of fire and life . . . Mr. de G. showed us a lovely diamond eternity ring . . . a type of ring which its becoming very popular again because it makes such a perfect wedding band, anniversary gift, or gift to commemorate any "big" occasion! . . . Speaking of rings, we saw a very interesting 14 kt. gold one made like a belt with buckle . . . This too would be an unusual wedding band . . . We repeat the word "unusual" to describe a gorgeous necklace of fresh water pearls (which come from clams instead of oysters) . . . And there's a heavy 18kt. gold dinner ring with a high setting like a chrysanthemum . . . sprinkled with twinkling diamonds and rubies . . . VERY striking! . . . And do see the gorgous amethyst bracelet in an antique 14kt. gold setting . . . and the 18kt. gold link one combinging a polished and a Florentine finish . . . de Goutiere Jeweller, Ltd., 2524 Estevan Ave., 592-3224.

Two neat tricks . . . for bedroom and any room! . . .

Just before writing this we nipped down to Standard Furniture for a second look at a couple of new things in their Sleep Shop on the 7th floor . . . Wanted to be sure they are just as neat as we thought they were . . . and the answer is an emphatic YES! . . . Seems a lot of people have been asking for metal bed headboards . . . Well, Standard have some honeys . . . fresh and pretty in bright cheery colors of blue, yellow, white, or all brass . . . with pretty curlicue designs ending in brass knobs . . . They're just in single bed size . . . and the white one is availabe with footboard and side rails . . . These are really interesting . . . and very reasonablly priced at $74.95 . . . Real neat for a child's room . . . or what about a pair for the guest room? . . . The other interesting item is called a "Sleepover" . . . Looks like a low, wide contemporary chair . . . a big pillow with a back . . . but it's actually foam rubber divided into four sections so when you flip it over you've got a nice comfortable bed . . . or a double bed if you put two together . . . This has to be the neatest idea of the year! Ideal for a small bachelor apartment or a smaller room . . . But of course, is definitely a young people's piece of furniture on account of it being so low . . . Sturdy attractive covers which can be zipped off for cleaning! . . . Standard Furniture Co., 737 Yates St., 382-5111.

New Report System Results 'Fantastic'

By PETER MEDWID
Times Staff

What would you like your child to achieve during the school year.

That's the question more than 200 parents at James Bay Community School will be asked and their answer . . . along with those of the teacher concerned . . . will be how "Johnny" will be judged on his next report card.

Principal Dave Allan said today the initial response to the new reporting system "has just been fantastic."

At the first open house for parents where the system was outlined by vice-principal Brian Wile, more than 90 per cent of the parents showed up and the remainder sent a reason why they couldn't.

Along with the parents at the meeting were 400 children and while the parents were listening they were being entertained with films and games by the community school staff.

Allan said the idea behind the plan is to get input from the child, the parent and the teacher on what sort of goals the student should achieve.

For the next two weeks parents will meet the teachers and the first report card under the new system will be out in November.

Wile said the process of developing the new reporting system started last January with a committee of parents, teachers and students.

"They designed a card that meets the needs of the individual pupil."

The teacher, after the initial first month of school this year set out objectives she felt the students in her group could meet.

These objectives are now being discussed with the parent to see if they agree — "it's a partnership between the parent and teacher."

Wile said that after November the student may or may not have met all the growth objectives . . . if he has then more are added; if not the work is continued on.

Under the new reporting system, Wile said a teacher could conceivably be sending out 30 different report cards for 30 students.

He said the school expects to have at least two more parent-teacher conferences before the end of the school year.

"We are doing away with judging students on a mass pre-conceived basis that ignores the fact that each is an individual with individual needs."

Wile said the new system has added greatly to the work load of each teacher but if it works "it's worth it."

In another area, a new slate of representatives — along with the present slate — will be serving on the community school council.

THE FRENCH CONNECTION — 20 students from Chavigny high school in Trois-Rivieres, Quebec — were given an official welcome Wednesday at Belmont Secondary School. The students arrived in Victoria this week with 20 Belmont Grades 9 and 10 French class students who had just spent two weeks in Trois-Rivieres. The Quebec students will be staying in Victoria for another week before returning home.

In 1974 Canada had about nine million registered motor vehicles. By 1980 this figure will likely have risen to 12.5 million.

The 16-page bilingual booklet "The Nine Million Source Cleanup" says that motor vehicles are responsible for approximately 60 per cent of urban air pollution. Since pollution is linked to various serious maladies and since it can cause dizziness, headaches and can slow down responses, strict control is necessary.

The booklet tells you how, with the help of a mobile Emission Testing Laboratory, cars produced in or imported into Canada are tested for compliance with standards in force across the country. For a vehicle to comply with these standards, the emission level at 50,000 miles — considered the average life of a car — must be equal to or below the level set for this particular mileage.

Although the federal government has passed the Clean Air Act, the provinces — and through them cities and municipalities — are free to establish their own anti-pollution laws, bylaws and regulations.

Welch Medical Report

Foreign objects that are swallowed by accident or intention sometimes require surgical removal, but more often than not, even the most unlikely object will eventually find its way through the intestinal canal and be passed in the normal manner.

Spoon handles, needles, razor blades, glass fragments, dentures and balloons filled with marijuana are just some of the objects which have ultimately turned up in the normal way and have not required surgical intvention.

Swallowers of foreign objects fall into four distinct groups: children, the psychologically disturbed, adults who swallow such objects accidentally and finally those who undertake such gestures intentionally to defy those around them or force others to pay attention to them.

The last are usually mentally deranged and are often a special problem in correctional institutions for the criminally insane.

Such prisoners resort to swallowing glass fragments, razor blades or spoon handles in order to be removed from irksome confinement into relatively comfortable infirmaries, even at the risk of undergoing surgery.

When small children are discovered with foreign material in their mouths, some of which they may have swallowed, X-ray studies of the abdomen will often identify the offending object. If none can be readily seen it may be necessary to use liquid solutions of barium to provide a contrasting shadow that will reveal the swallowed object.

Even sharp objects such as needles rarely perforate the bowel. This is because the motion of the bowel tends to turn them around, blunt end forward, and guide them safely through the intestines. This fortunate happening has been verified experimentally.

Sharp-pointed objects were fed experimentally to animals. Seventy per cent of the objects were turned around and ultimately expelled, with the dull end leading. In these studies, reports in the "Annals of Surgery," 800 needles were ingested without complication.

Normal adults sometimes inadverteitly swallow foreign objects due to simple carelessness. Other contributing factors may be the wearing of dentures which reduce the sensitivity of the lining of the mouth, excessive alcohol intake, rapid eating and poor vision.

One of the unpleasant aspects of the conservative, watchful-waiting treatment of swallowed foreign objects is the examination of all stools that are passed in order to recover the culprit.

Hanging a "fish net" over the toilet bowl is one way, but Dr. Fred E. Pittman of the Medical University of South Carolina in Charleston reported a neat and fastidious means of spotting foreign objects which have been detected by X-rays of the abdomen.

Every day's stools are passed into a cardboard container, which is tightly sealed and sent to be X-rayed. He called the technique, "the Baldwim Fecogram," naming it after Dr. John Baldwin who first suggested the method to him when they were fellow interns in medical training.

Souffle Success Spurs Repeat Using Eggplant

By MARY MOORE

Spurred on by my success by our guests who ate myu Turnip Souffle and by our readers who made it, I have made another vegetable souffle using eggplant this time, by our guests who ate my Home Economist friend Iris Gillespie.

EGGPLANT SOUFFLE
(serves 6; highly recommended)

2 medium-sized eggplants
2 tsp. salt
1 bay leaf
2 whole cloves
1 tbsp. butter
1 c. shredded old cheese
½ c. milk
2 eggs — yolks and white separated
½ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
1 c. soft bread crumbs
½ c. buttered crumbs

Slice and pare the eggplant. Cook in boiling water to half cover with the 2 teaspoons salt, bay leaf and closes until tender. Drain, discard bay leaf and cloves, and mash.

Add butter, cheese, milk and egg yolks and immediately beat to mix in egg yolks and soften cheese. Add salt and pepper and soft crumbs.

Beat leftover egg whites until stiff and fold in.

Turn into souffle dish buttered on bottom but not sides or ordinary casserole sprayed with non-stick coating. Sprinkle top with buttered crumbs. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 15 to 20 minutes. Be sure to serve this at once.

Excellent as a featured item on a meal for vegetarians but this will be a welcome change to hostesses who are forever seeking new ways to serve vegetables. Great with lamb.

NOTE: Write to Mary Moore, 32 Churchill Ave., Hamilton, Ont., enclosing stamped self-addressed envelope and 10c for each specified recipe.

The morning session will consist of two panels, the first discussing general health awareness, menopause, surgical procedures, pregnancy and stress syndrome, and the second panel will present some psychological perspectives of health, separation and aging. Workshops will be held in the afternoon.

There is no admission charge.

The Wonderful World of Animals

By DR. FRANK MILLER

DEAR DR. MILLER: A friend's boat had a cat on board and he keeps the cat secured to a lifeline, a fish line actually, in case it falls overboard. Of course the line's always getting tangled up on the deck or somewhere and somebody's constantly having to untangle it so Sinbad, that's the cat, will shut up. Would that so-called safety line really save the cat if it went overboard? Wouldn't one of those life vests like the small size for doggies be better? — A.A.

DEAR A.A.: When the vessel is not underway, either the line or the life preserver of sorts could prove lifesaving should Sinbad slip overboard. The problem with a preserver is that very few cats will gracefully tolerate being that encumbered. If you think Sinbad screams now, wait till you try to put him in a preserver. With the boat underway, the lifeline can still be lifesaving provided someone notices quickly enough that the feline had fallen overboard. A towed feline would fare badly, and rescue would have to be soon after the initial dunking to be appreciated.

DEAR DR. MILLER: If a pygmy owl is eating ground beef, can it get by on that? — B.E.

DEAR B.E. For a short time only. These little owls will also need beetles, mealworms, grasshoppers, or moths to round out the diet.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Age, I suppose, has something to do with it. Rocky's going on 12. For the past couple of months he's been drinking more and more water and having more and more bladder problems. He demands to be taken out more during the day and even has to go in the middle of the night, barking 'til we let him out. His doctor says it's a chronic kidney problem and that we've got to let him have all the water he wants. How do other dog owners handle a situation like this? A friend, former friend I should say, suggested we put Rocky to sleep. That we wouldn't do. How do other peoople handle this that really love their dogs? — A.E.

DEAR A.E.: If there are enough members in the family, you can set up Relieve Rocky shifts on a 'round the clock basis. Individual owners have set up indoor "outhouses" and taught their dogs to use indoor facilities. For those who have an outdoor area which can be suitably fenced, a doggie door and outside run may provide the ideal solution.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I've just found the best bedding for my gerbil, Jerri. She really loves it. It's cotton. The roll cotton stuff you use for bandages. It's a little expensive I guess, but when she likes it so much it's worth it. I just wanted to pass along that tip for other gerbil people. — T.M.

DEAR T.M.: Thanks for your well-intended tip, but a layer of cotton, contrary to Jerri's opinion, doesn't make it as a permissible pad for gerbils. The cotton could become twisted into crude strands which might twist around tail or limbs with constricting, catastrophic consequences. Straw is certainly safer, and there are many commercial litter products available which, while not as comfy as cotton, are considerably safer.

DEAR DR. MILLER: I used to have a horse. The vet always insisted on tetanus shots if the leg got a hole in it. My dog's vet never mentions tetanus shots or asks about it. If the dog gets a puncture wound in the foot, maybe it's a penicillin shot for infection and that's it. What about tetanus in dogs? Does penicillin kill it, or what's the difference? — M.E.

DEAR M.E.: First, the horse is much more susceptible to tetanus than the dog and second, the tetanus organisms are more likely to be lurking in areas where horses are kept. The veterinarian's more concerned about other organisms than he is the tetanus bacillus, though some penicillin injections would also do a reasonably good job of preventing tetanus infections in either species.

DEAR DR. MILLER: If you're going to gather mushrooms, and you're not sure about whether or not one is poisonous, but you see a squirrel eating some, wouldn't it be safe to pick that kind to eat, too? I've picked some like that and Mother made me throw them out. I don't think that was fair. — A.N.

DEAR A.N.: Fortunately for you, Mother made the right move. No one should ever eat a mushroom unless it's been passed as safe by an expert,and not a self-styled expert and not a self-styled expert, either. The squirrel simply because it doesn't care. It can chomp down a mushroom without any ill effects which would be poisonous to a person. Obviously, then, it's not a reliable guide. Where mushroom munching is concerned, there is no room for error. So to be on the safe side, get yours only from the grocery store.

What If . . .?

DEAR ABBY: An item in your column brought up this question: During a marriage ceremony, when the person who officiates says, "If anyone is present who knows a reason why this couple should not be wed, let him speak now or forever hold his peace," what would happen if someone were to speak up with a reason? Would the wedding take place? Or would it be stopped right then and there.

Has anyone ever attended a wedding when someone voiced an objection? — D.N. and J. C. ATBSU.

DEAR D. AND J.: I've seen it only in "B" movies, but if such an incident has actually occurred, I'm sure that someone out there will write in. Readers?

DEAR ABBY: Thank God I've got you to talk to because I couldn't tell this to anyone else.

I am scared half out of my mind. I think there must be something terribly wrong with me. I am afraid I am going crazy.

I'm afraid of being around people anymore because when someone says something to me, I wonder why they said it. What I mean is, I have this feeling that people say one thing to me and really mean something else.

I have a dull headache over one eye all the time. Sometimes it throbs and throbs. My teachers think I'm faking, and my mother is sick of hearing me gripe about it, so I just keep quiet. I shake a lot and cry when I'm alone.

Now that I've told you, I feel better, but I know it's going to happen again. Please help me. I am 15. — AFRAID.

DEAR AFRAID: Show your mother this column and ask her to please take you to a doctor. If she refuses, take it to your teacher, your principal or school nurse. You need professional help. Write again soon, dear, and please include your name and address. I care.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have been married almost five years. We bought matching wedding bands, which we both wore at the time.

I noticed a few months ago that he has been leaving his band at home. He does office work ,so it can't be that it's a hazard at work.

I mentioned it once or twice, and he said the band gives him a little rash. I know that the rash goes away in a day or two because my ring sometimes did the same to me.

My question is: Do I have cause to feel hurt? And should I mention it to him again, or should I just take mine off, too, and see how he likes it? — HURT.

DEAR HURT: The word from here is: Don't feel hurt, don't mention it to him again and don't take your off "to see how he likes it." That's childish. Maybe he's gained a few pounds, and it's not as comfortable as it used to be.

DEAR ABBY: I am a clergyman, and as such, I perform many marriage ceremonies.

My pet peeve is the well-meaning shutterbug who insists on flashing his camera during the wedding service.

One such photographer actually kept crawling around on the altar, adjusting the bride's veil and the groom's coat. He even asked me to please "lean in" a little more toward the couple. And all this while I was performing the ceremony!

Please put something in your column to discourage this type of thing.—DISTRACTED PASTOR

DEAR DISTRACTED: Seems to me that a pastor performing a marriage is, or should be, in command. He should lay down conditions for photography, and if the client couple dislikes the conditions, let 'em hunt up another pastor.

CONFIDENTIAL TO WORRIED IN DAYTON, OHIO: Please, please tell your mother TODAY that you think you might be pregnant. She will know what to do. No girl should have a baby at age 13.

PERSPECTIVES AND PREJUDICES

'Triviality' Pays Way for 'Relevance'

By REV. J. A. DAVIDSON

Some years ago a woman I was chatting with at a church gathering told me about her nephew, a young man about to enter his final year in a theological college.

"He's not planning to enter the ordinary parish ministry," she said, "but hoping to go into a wider field of Christian service."

She smiled and added, "But of course he always has been clever."

I worried about her not very subtle suggestion that the ordinary parish ministry is a narrower field of Christian serive.

For about 15 years now two words have frequently been used in discussions of the Christian minisry, "relevant" and "exciting" — and they have been used to point to what the ordinary parish ministry generally isn't and to what can be found only in the new forms of ministry which are developing outside the conventional congregation.

This line of thought was brought into focus in 1961 in the book, The Noise of Solemn Assemblies, written by Peter Berger, U.S. sociologists who specialized in religious institutions: "The sharp edge of the Christian engagement with the modern world is not likely to be made in the parish."

Unfortunately for many of the clergy who feel they should be serving in wider fields there simply aer not enough jobs in those fields for all of them.

And parish ministry is now more difficult and more demanding than it was in the not very distant past.

But a new perspective on the parish, the congregation, the local church, seems to be developing.

Hans Kung, an influential Roman Catholic theologian, reflecting decisions of the Second Vatican Council, has said that the local church "is in no way to be seen as a subdivision of the real 'Church" and that "the whole Church can only be understood in terms of the local Church and its concrete actions; the local Church is the real Church."

It must be recognized that the local church is the economic base for the whole Church's engagement with the world. In the United Church of Canada, for instance, nearly 90 per cent of the money used in its wider work and mission comes off the offering plates passed each Sunday in its 4,330 congregations.

It is a hard economic fact that "relevance" and "excitement" n the Christian engagement are paid for by the allegedly irrelevant and unexciting.

A creative Christian presence in the world cannot, of course, be sustained exclusively in the local church. The Church should extend and develop its specialized ministry and mission and search for more places of engagement with the world.

But if there is no effective engagement with the world in and though local churches there will be in the end no effective Christian engagement anywhere.

No congregation is free from triviality and pettiness and hypocrisy, and everyone who is activley involved does at times experience frustration and disappointment.

But in every congregation there are many opportunities for expressing Christian conviction and commitment in ways which sustain the Christian presence in the world.

And, therein, is the ground of relevance and excitement in the local church today.

State of Family To Be Examined

Canon Hilary Butler says his hope is that politicians and church representatives can get together and really examine the state of the family in British Columbia.

Butler is program committee chairman of the provincial government funded conference on the strengthening of the family unit "in the midst of future shock".

There will be 155 elected church delegates and 45 resource people from throughout B.C. here for the conference, slated for Nov. 17-20.

"The November meeting is only the initial phase from which we hope to set up a definite organization for the local study of family problems," Butler said.

He said that by January of 1976, discussion groups will have been set up throughout B.C. All findings will be tabulated by a central committee and discussed at another conference during the spring of 1976.

"This last conference will be the culmination of all our efforts, at which time we hope to be able to make some recommendations on family concerns to be communicated to all levels of government, religious bodies and any other concerned agencies."

Butler said church leaders requested to meet with Premier Barrett and Human Resources minister Norm Levi two years ago and after discussion for about one and a half years, the government announced last March that it would sponsor the conference.

"It all began in November of '73," said Butler. "The NDP had just come into power and there were a lot of rumors going around about government plans to nationalize voluntary agencies, which would naturally effect a lot of the church-sponsored agencies."

He said that arising from this initial meeting, discussion took place about various social needs which the government and churches might cooperate to meet.

Two other meetings, by invitation of Barrett, followed.

"The Premier and church leaders (including Butler of the Anglican Church, Bishop Remi de Roo of the Roman Catholic Church and Rev. Bruce Malloy of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church) decided that a conference on the family should be convened in hope of finding solutions to factors causing family stresses," Butler said.

The legislative assembly approved government-funding of the conference March 15 and in May Connie Hawley, of the department of Human Resources, was appointed conference co-ordinator.

"At this point we've sent out letters to all clergy in the province, 2,700 all told," Hawley said, "asking them to meet with their colleagues, consult with their MLAs and any other interested organizations to select two delegates from their school district area to attend the November conference."

She said the exceptions are Victoria, which is allowed three delegates, and Vancouver, which can elect six.

Hawley said all religious sects are involved in the conference.

"In the planning committee alone, we have Anglicans, Roman Catholics, evangelical representatives, Presbyterians, Jews and even Sikhs," she said.

Butler added: "We're all working as one group and look on the conference as a values issue rather than a religious issue."

Decrees Approved

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope Paul approved decrees Friday opening the way for the proclamation of a Lebanese monk to become a saint of the Roman Catholic Church and a German nun to be beatified, or called blessed. The monk was Charber Makhlouf who lived from 1828 to 1898 in a Maronite monastery. The nun was Sister Maria of the Divine Heart, a member of the Order of the Charity of the God Shepherd. She was born in 1863 and died in 1899.

Home for Retarded Planned

The Greater Victoria Council of Churches unanimously has decided that a holding society be established under the council for the asquisition of property to provide homes for retarded young adults.

Dr. Bert King, president of the Council of Churches, said the holding society will be set up within four months and encourages people to "will their homes to the society."

"There is no better purpose for which their homes can be used to provide an opportunity for retarded young adults to achieve a sense of independence and dignity," King said Friday.

Garth Homer, administrator of the G. R. Pearkes Clinic for Handicapped Children, who has pushed for the establishment of such a society, said he is very much encouraged by the decision of the Council of Churches.

"We do everything we can for these children up to a certain age, then we have to let them go because we are not equipped to look after adults," Homer said.

"So what happens to them . . . they can't be employed, their parents get older and the children who have now become adults want an independent lifestyle. But with no group home facilities available for them, they often find themselves in institutions."

He said that these young adults can't grow in institutions where every decision has been made for them because they are never placed in a position where they can assume personal responsibility.

King said that the Council of Churches' plan is to set up homes with group parents in supportive roles to encourage the retarded to develop to their full capacity.

New Pastor Stresses 'Body' Concept

A man who says he has come to Victoria to help build a church on the "body" concept is the new pastor at Victoria Baptist Chapel, which holds services at the Cedar Hill Community Centre, 3220 Cedar Hill Road.

"Each person is a different and vitally-needed member of the same body," said Rev. Bo Brantley, "and we are a body and need each other."

Brantley and his wife, Karen, arrived in Victoria in mid September. Brantley received his Bachelor of Science degree in psychology from the University of Alabama and his masters degree in divinity from Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth, Texas.

Services at the chapel are held on Sundays beginning with a family Bible study at 10 a.m. At 11 a.m. there is a worship service.

NEW YOUTH MINISTER

A new youth minister will be joining the staff at Emmanuel Baptist Church, 212 Cedar Hill Crossroad, this Sunday.

Robert Bentall will be with Emmanuel Baptist on a interim basis until a permanent replacement is found for Norman Barton, who became a prison chaplain last August.

Bentall graduated from Fuller Theological Seminary in Pasadena, Calif. this year with a masters in theology and Christian education. For the past four years, he has served as director of Keats Island Camp.

Pressmen, Post To Talk

WASHINGTON (WP) — The Washington Post and the newspaper's striking pressmen agreed Friday to reopen talks with a federal mediator next Tuesday, as the Post continued to publish a 24-page paper in six non-union printing plants around Washington.

Meanwhile, U.S. Attorney Earl Silbert began assembling evidence to present to a federal grand jury investigating damage to the post's printing presses and assaults on several non-striking employees which the company blames on the striking pressmen.

In response to Silbert's announced intentions, James A. Dugan, the president of Local 6 of the Newspaper and Graphic Communications Union, which represents the striking pressmen, said he would urge his men to cooperate with the U.S. attorney's investigation. Dugan said at a press conference that the violence which occurred in the Post press room early Wednesday was neither approved nor condoned by the union.

"They let their emotions cloud their normal good judgment," Dugan said of the men in the press room when the violence occurred. He added that he had no personal knowledge of the damage done and was not in the Post building when it occurred.

Dugan had said on Wednesday that whatever violence occurred was the results of "frustration" he blamed on the Post company's bargaining tactics, which he said were dilatory.

The abbreviated edition of The Post distributed Friday — a few hours late in many places — and planned for Saturday and Sunday was assembled in the Post building by Post employes trained to use computerized photo-offset equipment. They made paste-ups of the paper's 24 pages, which were then photographed and engraved and sent by helicopter from the roof of the Post building to the six printing plants.

Despite a federal court restraining order to prevent further violence, five newsroom employes of the Post who had passed through the pressmen's picket line to return home Thursday night were roughed up by unidentified persons at a corner near the Post building.

These people said they were punched, kicked or shoved by assailants. They said a Washington, D.C. policeman sitting in his patrol car nearby took no action, and no arrests were made.

The most serious during the strike was suffered by James Hoover, the newspaper's night pressroom foreman. He was attacked during the violence in the pressroom early Wednesday and suffered a cut that required 12 stitches to close.

Convicted Over Cocaine

County court Judge Peter Millward will sentence Freeborn Oct. 20.

Freeborn, of Pascoe Road, Sooke, was stopped by police on the Patricia Bay Highway in Saanich Nov. 20, 1974, and two ounces of cocaine were found in a garbage bag on the floor by the front seat.

Court was told cocaine was selling for $1,400 to $1,700 an ounce on the street at the time and that two ounces would produce 1,344 individual doses.

Freeborn said the car he was driving back from Vancouver belonged to Donald Harris, a neighbor at that time, although he assumed at the time it belonged to Harris' common-law wife Diane Campbell because she used it. Freeborn said he borrowed it because his car had broken down.

He denied knowledge of what was in the car until police, who admitted Freeborn was co-operative, told him.

Harris, testifying under protection of the Canada Evidence Act, said "an old friend of mine" sold him two ounces of cocaine which he placed in a plastic bag in the car in Vancouver. He said he paid $2,800, half of it down, and that he didn't tell Freeborn about it.

The cocaine was "basically for myself" and if he had friends with him, probably they would share some with him.

Judge Millward said neither the testimony of Freeborn or Harris was acceptable and he concluded it was "completely unreliable" and he did not accept any portion of it.

"As the Crown says," he commented, "it has not the ring of truth."

Mike Hutchison appeared for the Crown and George Jones represented Freeborn.

Pot Puffers Eye Top Court Chance

WASHINGTON (AP) — Encouraged by a favorable decision in Alaska and victories in half a dozen state legislatures, opponents of laws that prohibit smoking marijuana have turned their attention to the United States Supreme Court.

The high court, which has not handed down a major marijuana decision in six years, will have two marijuana-related cases awaiting it when it returns Oct. 16 from its summer recess.

Neither case directly asks the court to decide whether laws against private possession of marijuana for personal use within the home are constitutonal.

Marijuana activists are confident the court will have to confront that question before long, however, and they hope the forthcoming cases may indicate the court's attitude.

"Soon — I don't know whether it will be next month, next year or when — a U.S. court of appeals or a state supreme court is going to show that the federal constitution protects the private use of marijuana," said Peter H. Meyers, counsel to the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws.

"Then the Supreme Court is going to want to hear it."

The cases currently pending before the high court involve challenges to a federal marijuana law and state laws in Ohio and Louisiana.

NORML is seeking a judgment that the Louisiana and federal laws against simple possession of marijuana are an infringement of the constitutionally proteted right of privacy. The immediate question for the Supreme Court, however, is whether to hear the organization's argument that a three-judge federal court should be empanelled in the case.

Officials in Ohio have appealed a decision in which the U.S. Circuit Court in Cincinnati determined that penalties prescribed by the state's marijuana law are unconstitutional, cruel and unusual punishments. The penalties are 10 to 20 years for possession for sale and 20 to 40 years for sale.

In the Louisiana case, NORML lawyers cite a decision of the Alaska Supreme Court last May. That decision marked the first time that the highest court of any state had held that a person has o constitutionally guaranteed right to smoke marijuana in his own home.

The decision dealt with the Alaska constitution, not the U.S. constitution, and consequently is not subject to appeal to the Supreme Court. Alaska's constitution, through a recent amendment, includes a specific right to privacy, as do the constitutions of California and a handful of other states.

The federal constitution does not specifically provide for a right of privacy, but the Supreme Court has held that such a right is implicit in the constitutional guarantee of due process of law.

Consequently, advocates of liberalized marijuana laws think the Alaska decision has a bearing on the federal constitutional issue.

"It's a fresh wind," Meyers said in an interview. "It doesn't have to be followed by any other court, but I think it has to have an influence."

The decision involves a technical but crucial question of the standard by which the constitutionality of laws affecting privacy rights is to be measured.

UIC Fight Vowed

WINNIPEG (CP) — New Democratic Party Leader Ed Broadbent will stage a major parliamentary battle against higher unemployment insurance premiums planned by the government.

"These announced changes in the Unemployment Insurance Commission Act represent a dishonest, disguised and disreputable tax on average and lower income working Canadians," he said in a speech prepared for delivery here.

Broadbent said higher premiums undermine the principle that the government should pay the entire cost of benefits for claims made when unemployment exceeds four per cent.

Changes planned by the government would boost premiums and raise the break-even point for the unemployment insurance system to an unemployment rate "somewhere around six per cent" by 1977, Broadbent said.

Employer-employee contributions now cover the full cost of UIC benefits up to four per cent unemployment.

The NDP leader accused the government of spreading a false impression that there is wide-spread abuse of unemployment insurance benefits.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD
CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.
Don't allow the reader to speculate.

6—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

7—WANT ADS THAT FAIL TO bring the desired results do so usually, not through a lack of [illegible] but because they are poorly worded or contain inadequate information.

8—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call:

PREAMBLE

Shawnigan Lake School has operated a biological sewage treatment system since 1959. Laboratory tests indicated that a good level of treatment is currently being provided. Effluent from this system discharges to a ditch which eventually finds its way to Shawnigan Creek.

The present application, published below, proposes that the treated effluent from the current system be discharged underground to tile disposal fields located on school property, in place of the current discharge to Shawnigan Creek. A three-year phase-out period is proposed in view of the Cowichan Valley Regional District's studies for overall sewage disposal, which are currently underway.

Envelope Contains Moonman's Answer

They all ask the same question — whether a 12-year-old at a supermarket in Scranton, Pa., or Queen Elizabeth in a private audience at Buckingham Palace.

"How do you go to the bathroom out in space?

To illustrate his answer U.S. astronaut James Lovell travels the speaking curcuit with a manilla envelope — and he brought it with him to Victoria this week when he addressed some 500 people at UVic.

"I should have known then ..." he told the campus crowd.

But before he proceeded with his crisp account of that dramatic attempt at a third moon landing he dispelled anyone's preconceived idea of what an astronaut is.

Lovell opened the brown paper package and took out a plastic pouch with an adhesive collar arround the open end — "the official Apollo toilet."

The aim of the individual is equally important — even during a multi-million dollar expedition with all eyes of the world on you, he said, holding the apparatus above the podium in the old gym.

The problem wasn't worked on by National Aeronautics and Space Association engineers earlier in the space program when flights lasted less than a day, he said, but with longer journeys of several days the need for simple and efficient waste disposal became evident.

Lovell, a tall sober-looking man whose face at times breaks into a broad grin, described to the snickering crowd one early solution which entailed placing iron filings in space food and supplying a magnetized metal pole.

"If you've ever eaten food containing iron filings you'll know why this idea was abandoned," he said.

After establishing his down-to-earth rapport with the audience the astronaut said he had spent time in Eastern Canada (his father was born in Toronto) but that he enjoyed this rare visit to Vancouver Island — a lush contrast to his hot and dusty Southern home.

The rest is history and the gathering remained hushed as the veteran of four major space flights recounted the six-day voyage which, 100,000 miles away from earth travelling at thousands of miles per hour, turned into a chilling ordeal.

In preparation for a moon landing, Lovell and fellow spacemen Jack Swigert and Fred Haise had just pulled the Apollo craft from a trajectory that wouldd have taken them around the moon and back home.

"I looked up at Haise and realized he hadn't made the noise ... at the control panel Swigert's eyes were getting wider and wider."

Lovell's pulse raced from 70 to 130 heartbeats per minute — a gash ran down the length of the service module like a long slice in the hull of a ship. The one remaining oxygen tank had sustained a slow leak.

The spacecraft was steered around the lunar surface out of the moon's gravitational pull to avoid a crash landing.

The trio scrambled into the cramped quarters of the lunar module and activated its independent support systems since the command module was immobilized.

Using the tiny module as the cockpit for the inoperative bulk of the command and service units, Lovell navigated manually to the re-entry point.

Had he not attained the critical angle necessary for entry the craft would have either incinerated penetrating the atmosphere or bounced off it and gone into perpetual orbit. From that point on the landing was routine — almost an anticlimax to the abortive mission.

There are no candid comments on failure or personal fear on record from the three crewmen — however there was one complaint.

Lovell, displaying his plastic pouch at UVic Thursday, also took a small, neatly-folded square of tissue paper from the envelope.

"This was not sufficient ..." he said with his characteristic grin.

LOVELL ... answers question

15-Year Term For Robbery

CALGARY (CP) — Guy Marcel Smith of St. Jerome, Que., who earlier pleaded guilty to kidnapping a bank manager and his wife, July 4 and robbing the husband's bank of $245,059, was sentenced Friday to 15 years in a federal penitentiary.

In handing down the sentence, Provincial Judge Douglas McDonald said he found "room for mitigation" in the circumstances of the case which tended to balance the serious nature of the five kidnapping and robbery charges.

RADAR SYSTEM FOR THE BIRDS

TORONTO (CP) — The National Research Council (NRC) is testing a radar system to help air traffic controllers warn pilots about birds, a council researcher said.

F. R. Hunt told an international electronics conference that the most serious bird hazards exist only a few months a year — primarily during migrations — so it is difficult to justify expensive new radar solely to detect birds.

He said there has been only one air crash in Canada known to have been caused by hitting a bird. Three persons were killed in that crash.

However, Dr. Hunt said, the Canadian forces have lost planes after hitting birds, although the pilots have safely bailed out.

He said birds almost caused the crash of a Boeing 737 near Winnipeg a few years ago and bird damage to engines costs Air Canada and CP Air about $200,000 a year.

Dr. Hunt said the NRC is testing a prototype system that would analyze the density of birds in an area and calculate the probability of hitting a bird.

Wars Yield Benefits To Medical Research

HALIFAX (CP) — Medical research benefitted from the American experience in the Vietnam war and the same will probably be true with every major military conflict in the future.

The First World War introduced plastic surgery.

The Second World War introduced infectious disease control.

That's the view of Dr. Thomas De Kornfeld, a University of Michigan professor, who said the Vietnam war focused the attention of medical researchers on adult respiratory distress syndrome (ARDS).

The syndrome was noticed when combatants suffering injury frequently died of lung failure.

Dr. Kornfeld said the syndrome is caused by a variety of conditions: shock, sepsis, aspiration, fat embolization, renal failure—all leading to a condition which causes stagnation of blood flow.

Any damage to lung tissue leads to fluid in the lungs and a vicious cycle is established —the area is unsuited for gas exchange and capillary embolli leads to increased pressure on the heart.

Studies in Vietnam showed 85 per cent of those with severe heart injuries died of ARDS. However, if the spinal cord had been severed high up so that the person was a quadriplegic, the respiratory distress sydrome did not develop.

"This gave us the first clue," Dr. Kornfeld said. "This was proof that for this business to develop you had to have in intact nervous system."

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Temptation may be to "give in" too easily. In actuality, delay would be better than immediate concession. You may feel odds against you are greater than they are — know it and get second wind. You have more in your favor than might be imagined.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Highlight versatility. Expand horizons. Maintain sense of humor. One who chastises you is whistling in dark. Know it; refuse to be drawn into senseless dispute. Gemini, Sagittarius persons could be in picture. Accent is on secrets, visits to hospital or institution.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You may have to revise, rebuild. This includes some of your hopes and wishes. Avoid basing actions on impulse. Give your logic a chance to operate. One who makes promises is sincere, but may lack capital.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Family is restless. Loved one wants to make change. You are drawn between extravagant move and need for security. Key is intelligent compromise. If you make gesture, you will gain favorable response. Means indicate that you do understand feelings of others.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Study Cancer message. You are due for "adjustment" at home. You will make concession — and this should be good, despite minor blow to pride. Accent is on relatives, short trips, call or message which gets you going toward ultimate goal.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): New Moon, conjoined with Pluto, highlights your tax, partnership and marriage situations. Money of partner, mate figures in picture. Time to re-evaluate shelters, investments, dependency on one who is a supposed financial wizard.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Organize — get policy in effect. Show muscle, if necessary. Cycle is such that you can get what you need, including money. Know it and refuse to take back seat. Capricorn, Cancer persons are likely to be in picture.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Finish rather than begin — round out plans, objectives. Vitality makes a comeback. Employment or special service picture is brighter. Aries, Libra individuals play key roles. One behind the scenes may call for clandestine meeting.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Romantic, creative interests could dominate. Imprint sytle. Lead rather than imitate. Welcome variety, chance for greater self-expression. A new acquaintance helps inspire you. Be open to suggestions without abandoning your own "master plan."

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): You understand what should be done — key is to have wisdom and discipline required to do it. Pace is slow but progress could be steady. Cancer — and another Capricorn — might be in picture. You may be summoned for "special conference."

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Travel, publishing, learning process — these are highlighted. Goal is subject to change — that will be your discovery. Be flexible. Keep recent diet, health resolutions. Social affair brings you into contact with one who "knows the ropes."

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Emphasis is on money and how it gets that way. Means you review assets, credits and debits. Check leases, tax matters. Aquarius, Leo and Scorpio persons could figure prominently. Caution now will prevent costly mistakes.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are creative, fond of music and travel, capable of expressing yourself in unique manner. Gemini, Virgo persons play important roles in your life. Burden is lifted next month. New starts made this year result in greater independence. You are a dynamic person, very attractive, sensitive and restless.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Highlight flexibility. The more versatile you are, the better the results. Accent on unusual interests, including the occult. Means you dig deep, uncovering what has been hidden. Gemini, Sagittarius persons are in picture.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Be a shrewd observer. Check details. Conversational banter could provide a revelation. Aquarius, Leo, Scorpi persons figure prominently. Accent is on partnership, marriage. Your security could be at stake. Obtain valid appraisal.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be prepared for change, travel, variety. Another Gemini — and a Virgo — figure prominently. One who seemed "out-of-reach" will give you helping hand. Key now is open lines of communication. A relative with money problems could consult you.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your home, family and your ability to deal with minor crisis is emphasized. You are drawn to situation which might not be good for you. Taurus, Libra could figure prominently. You are going to be flattered, perhaps wined and dined.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Pressure builds for you to choose a course, take a stand, close a transaction. Real estate could be involved. Key is to be familiar with costs, appraisals, basic issues — and to see in light of reality. Pisces, Virgo individuals could figure prominently.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Quick response indicated to ideas, proposals. You'll need time to reassess schedules, priorities. One in authority is receptive. Key is to formulate concept, to show that your plans are workable. Financial prospects improve.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Let go of losing proposition. Insist on a new deal for yourself. Maintain self-esteem. Refuse to give up something for nothing. Accent is on payments, collections, protection of valuables. Be discreet about safety-deposit boxes and the like.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Light of publicity could be featured. Sudden events may contrive to catch you off balance. You make new starts, contacts. Creative energies are utilized. Leo, Aquarius individuals may be in picture. Personal magnetism flows — people find you fascinating. Tell story with conviction.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Review prospects, aspirations. Budget is important. Plan and keep money resolutions. You have option — there is no need to be forced into corner. Know that your position is stronger than it may appear on surface.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Windfall could come your way. Circumstances, timing favor you. Profit is derived from what appeared to be a loss. You might want to celebrate! Aquarian figures in picture. A wish is fulfilled. Genuine compliment received from member of opposite sex.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You get facts as they are, not warmedover versions. You can dig deep, between the lines. The going may be difficult, but you could strike pay dirt. Key is persistence, patience and a reverence for truth. Leo, Taurus, Scorpio persons could figure prominently.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Unusual sources provide credit, information, travel tips. Be receptive give full play to intellectual curosity. Be ready for change of scenery. Analyze. Find reasons for happenings. What was feared turns out to be hollow, nothing solid.

IF TODAY IS YOUR BIRTHDAY you are musical, a natural psychologist, possess melodious voice and have a "sweet tooth." Taurus, Scorpio, Libra persons play significant roles in your life. June was important — November sees you coming to terms with those who pull strings of authority. During this month, October, you make valuable social contacts.

Companion Planting Means More Than Just Friendly Plants...

GARDENING
jack beastall

Companion planting is capturing the interest of some home gardeners. Gardening periodicals are stressing it as something new, a fantastic breakthrough in the growing of food crops.

It is not new to those of us who have read some of the first gardening books ever published which state that certain crops "sown together in one field shall bring a great curse upon them so that famine spreads over the land."

In the wild, plants grow in communities. When a certain community is catalogued, many of the plants indigenous to the area are missing, but are later found in another community of different plants.

The theory has been that severe competition, between roots for moisture and nutrients, and between top growth for light and air, determines what plants can survive in any community.

More recently the theory of root exudates has been proposed. Experiments appear to indicate that roots do more than absorb nutrients needed for the development of the plant, they also return to the soil their waste products as exudates.

These exudates have been found to affect soil organism seeds, and other plants in various ways, and it could be a built-in protection against competition from aggressive neighbors.

Most gardeners know how difficult it is to establish cultivated plants beneath the spread of a western cedar. In wild land and parks, no underbrush huddles against the trunk of a western cedar as it does against the trunk of a Douglas Fir. The explanation has always been "Cedar oil."

As far back as the English industrial revolution it was found that crop rotation on a regular basis gave increased yields and less damage from pests and diseases, and it was presumed that different crops took different nutrients from the soil.

Experiments now show that too many plants of one species grown in a limited area can create an undesirable or intolerable soil condition due to the accumulation of their wastes.

On the other hand it has been determined that the exudates from one plant can have a stimulating or beneficial effect on plants of another species.

It is possible that unwanted plants (so-called weeds) that grow faster than our cultivated crops are stimulated by the exudates from the crop plants, and that crops which flourish in spite of weeds are stimulated by the native plants around them.

Weeds in fields or gardens have long been condemned as robbers of the soil moisture and nutrients needed by the cultivated crop, but we may now find the amounts they take are infinitesimal but their exudates actually inhibit the growth of the plants we need for food.

A fair amount of information on friends and enemies of our cultivated plants is tucked away in gardening books and periodicals, but much of it is vague, not properly authenticated, and usually based on one gardener's experience of apparent results over a limited period of one season or less.

To assume that mint will definitely keep butterflies away from cabbage has no value unless we know the extent of the butterfly population for that season.

Marigolds are credited with preventing infestations of some insects, but the marigold group consist of five distinct genera and few reports mention the genus or the species within that genus. The only one definitely identified to my knowledge is a South American that grows six feet high in the tropics, with its northern limits set at southern California.

A recent report that marigolds had "eliminated" the gooseberry bug in a U.S. garden means little to local gardeners because the botanical name of the marigold is not mentioned, nor the scientific name of the gooseberry bug, nor the part of the plant it attacks. Were the bugs eliminated or did they just avoid the presence of marigolds? Or were there any bugs that year?

Wilt resistant asters (Callistephus) have been bred in California for decades, but the plants still succumb in local gardens because the wilt of the northern temperate zones is not the same species as that present in the soils of the southern temperate zones.

Because of the vast differences in soils, soil organisms, kinds of pests and diseases over such a large area as the North American continent, it is little wonder that so many gardeners have tried recommended plant combinations and found them ineffective.

Only by experimenting in our own locality can we determine what combinations are best for the plants themselves and what combinations provide some measure of control over diseases and pests common to our soils and our climate.

One lone gardener with a city lot has little chance of finding the answers we need. If he tries three or four experiments at one time the results are likely to be misinterpreted, yet to conduct one experiment for five years to obtain conclusive results would be a slow process, and then only provide information on one crop in an isolated area.

To obtain a basic file of authentic information requires many gardeners scattered over a wide area, each performing a planned experiment and keeping accurate records of weather, type of season, insect population at the time, and other data that could beneficially or adversely affect the crop.

The information compiled over five or ten years would be a guide to further experimenting by local horticulturists and possibly agriculturists, and possibly set a pattern for similar investigation in other countries.

Information available at present indicates the friends of the potato to be beans, corn, cabbage, horseradish and eggplant, while its enemies are pumpkins, squash, cucumber, sunflower, tomato and raspberry.

Peas enjoy the company of carrots, turnips, radish, cucumbers, corn, beans and herbs, but will not tolerate the presence of onions, gladiolus or potatoes. Glads grown in a garden for several years are said to affect a potato crop 50 feet away.

Beets detest pole beans, and pole beans will not tolerate onions, beet, kohlrabi, nor sunflower. Carrots enjoy the company of peas, leaf lettuce, chives, onions, leeks, rosemary, sage, tomato, but not dill.

Tomatoes grown for three years in the same place have rid the area of couch grass although this creeping pest is growing thickly in the surrounding area.

Looking over this list we may find the reason some crop was poor one year, a crop which normally does well in the garden. Was it because we changed the crop next to it?

There is probably a lot more to this companion cropping than we realize, and as the need for more food increases someone will search for the answers, and a new mode of gardening will start.

WORK FOR WEEK

Last chance for planting daffs and other narcissi; they need rooting in early fall to give best results next spring.

If summer annuals remain, get them out before bad weather; if buying wallflowers, auriculas, polyanthuses or other spring biennials, plant these into good soil at once and move them later into the beds after the annuals have finished.

Plant pansies for spring blooms; they like screened compost and leafmould with enough sand for drainage, same as for violets.

Cacti in small pots must receive less water during winter though more often than those in large pots. Arrange coolest lightest place in home for these plants.

Get the trench prepared for sweet pea sowing towards middle of month. Also same preparation for sowing of garden peas and broad beans. These early crops of vegetables and flowers are priceless.

We are still watching and gathering the ripening tomatoes. Sweet peppers, eggplants and okra, and squash all are tender to frost and will succumb when the inevitable low temperature comes.

Costs Hobble Hikers

OTTAWA (CP) — Inflation apparently is putting a damper on the actvities of the not-so-hearty, not-quite-rich, hitchhiking traveller.

Talks with transients passing through Ottawa reveal a strain on the wallet and some disappointment with overnight facilities, partly explaining why fewer young people hit the roads during the summer.

Campgrounds in Ontario cost at least $3 a night and a single room at the YM-YWCA costs $10, plus tax. Few students headed to Salvation Army bunks and although a bed at the Youth Hostel Association was only $1, dormitory rules were discouraging to some.

"It was just too much for them," said a counter attendant at the Y. "A week in Ottawa at the Y could cost them almost $100 without food, and that's a lot of money for somebody trying to get by cheaply."

"Sure, there is a cheap way of spending a night in the city," one 24-year-old man said of hostels. "But they're just too regimented. It's like staying in a school for the night."

Males and females are separated in different dormitories.

"It doesn't have to be a brothel, but it's just too impersonal," said a 24-year-old American woman.

"If a guy and his wife or girlfriend are hitch-hiking around they want to stay together all the time," added the young man. "This is 1975, not the 1940s."

YM-YWCA spokesmen said they usually send students to the Ottawa hostel, which despite complaints, was fairly full during the summer.

Still, one veteran thumb traveller from Europe said there were fewer transients on the road than he expected and many hostels he stopped at were only half full.

TWO-BIT STORE BANKRUPT

Under the voluntary bankruptcy proceedings, Grant will be freed from pressure from creditors and allowed to do business as usual while it reorganizes its finances and figures out a way to pay its debts.

Grant owns 51 per cent of Zeller's Ltd. of Canada and operates Jones and Presnell Photography Studios and Granjewel Jewelers & Distributers as wholly-owned subsidiaries. Neither Zeller's nor the subsidiaries are affected by the bankruptcy of the parent company.

Robert H. Anderson, president, said Grant's liabilities of $1.03 billion exceeded assets by $1.3 million. But the balance sheet does not explain the full extent of the chain's financial troubles.

During 1974 Grant lost $175 million, one of the biggest losses ever by a U.S. retailer. Anderson said losses for 1975 were greater than expected and, at the company's request, trading was suspended Monday in Grant stock on the New York STock Exchange.

Grant owes $600 million to 27 major banks. Many of the loans were past due, and the company won an unprecedented agreement to defer payment on $300 million so it could purchase merchandise from suppliers, many of whom also are large creditors.

Some venders refused to ship goods "under any terms," Anderson said.

3 Killed in Attack On Beirut Airport

BEIRUT (AP) — Arab terrorists attacked Beirut International Airport today, spraying Lebanese security men and civilians with machine-gun fire in an apparent attempt to hijack an airliner. Police said three persons were killed and 14 wounded.

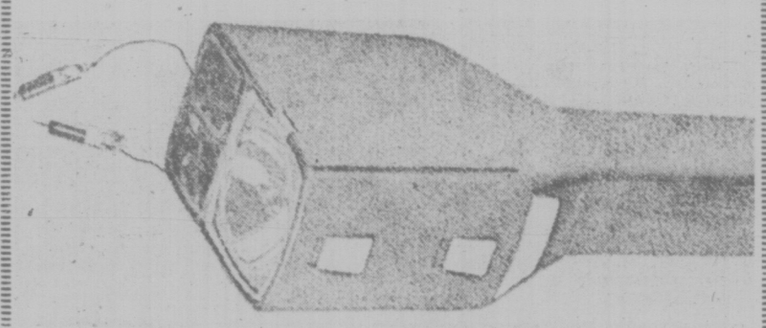
One of the gunmen was among those killed in a shoot-out with police and army commandos guarding the terminal. Two other gunmen were wounded and captured.

Police and Palestinian guerrilla sources said the gunmen probably wanted to use the hijacking to sabotage the Sinai peace accord between Egypt and Israel. There was also speculation they wanted to disrupt the ceasefire in Lebanon's factional warfare between Christians and Moslems.

The Palestine news agency WAFA said a fourth terrorist, who drove the car that carried the gunmen to the airport, was later turned over to police by the security arm of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Unofficial sources said the terrorists carried papers showing two of them to be Palestinian, one Syrian and one Libyan.

Police said an army commando and an Egyptian woman waiting for a flight to Cairo were also killed. Besides the two gunmen, the wounded included six Egyptians, a Lebanese airline employee, four policemen and an army commando.



WEAPON A SHOCKER

REDONDO BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Michael Mattingly, 24, and a friend heard noises Thursday in the garage below Mattingly's apartment. When they investigated they surprised burglars who were stealing a motorcycle, bicycle and car parts.

Then a flashlight shone in his eyes, Mattingly told police, and he heard what sounded like "the pop of a .22" and felt stinging sensations in his abdomen and arm.

An instant later, an electric shock coursed through his body, bringing him to his knees as the burglars fled.

Mattingly thus became the second person to be on the wrong end of the Taser, a new electric dart gun, in criminal hands.

Recently, a woman in Miami, Fla., robbed a gas station and used aTaser to immobilize an attendant who described the sensation as "like sticking your finger in a wall socket . . . the worst pain I ever felt."

The device may gain popularity with criminals who want to avoid charges of committing a crime with a deadly weapon — the Taser immobilizes but does not kill.

The weapon, manufactured by Advanced Chemical Technology of Arcadia, Calif., fired two barbs attached to 18 feet of wire. When they pierce the skin, the operator can sendcan send a 50,000 volt electrical charge into the target's body from the Taser's six batteries, causing uncontrollable spasms. The operator can turn the current on and off, controling the victim as long as the barbs, which do no serious harm themselves, remain imbedded in the skin.

More than 1,000 have been sold and the firm is now producing 200 a week.

Shuffle Reaction Mixed

Social Credit leader Bill Bennett latched on to a neat analogy and dubbed Premier Barrett a joker who "can't end a three year losing streak . . . because he's used the same old deck to deal another bad hand for the people of B.C."

Barrett just re-arranged an incompetent cabinet, said Bennett, and the moves will do nothing to solve the problems of B.C.

The only positive change Bennett said he saw in the new cabinet postings is that Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich, as the new finance minister, can "at least add."

Bennett said he saw "no improvement" in the shifting of the mines portfolio from Leo Nimsick to Economic Development Minister Gary Lauk and said he has no reason to believe Delta MLA Carl Liden will be an improvement as transport and communications minister.

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson said he is glad Nimsick is now travel minister "because he created a lot of closed down mines and now he can promote them as tourist attractions."

Both Gibson and Tory leader Scott Wallace had kind words for Robert Strachan who resigned as transport minister and is heading for London to serve as B.C.'s agent-general.

"I don't want to say anything in the slightest negative about Strachan now that he's gone," said Gibson.

His appointment, said Gibson, "is recognition of a long and distinguished life of public service in B.C."

The Liberal said he wished Liden luck in his new post and "almost anybody" would be better than Barrett as finance minister.

As for the mines portfolio, Gibson said changing ministers will not help — the government must reverse its mining taxation policies.

Wallace said the changes mark an improvement and strengthening of the cabinet but he, like others, was disappointed to see more double portfolios.

The combination of mining and economic development under Lauk will be a heavy one, he said, as will agriculture and finance under Stupich.

Wallace said it was sad to see Strachan dumped from the cabinet after his 22 years of service as an MLA, espe-

Propane Vote Today

Voting began today on a tentative settlement to end the eight-week-old propane distributors strike.

Members of the Teamsters Union and the Transport Labor Relations Association are voting on a proposed settlement reached Friday after meetings with Labor Minister Bill King.

King said he told both groups during meetings Thursday and Friday, the public interest was at stake and unless they came to some aggeement before 4 p.m. Friday he would recommend cabinet "take immediate steps."

The minister declined to specify what action cabinet would have taken but said the government is still ready and willing to move if either party rejects the settlement.

King was notified by phone shortly after 4 p.m. that negotiators for the two sides in Vancouver had come to an agreement and were willing to put it to their memberships.

The minister said he is "not in the business of making threats" and he did not want to discuss any ultimatums made to both parties but he said the public interest "must be supreme."

The strike has cut off propane and butane supplies to most B.C. users since July 21.

Hardest hit is the Nanaimo area where about 1,400 customers on a domestic grid system have been wihout propane since stocks ran out last week.

The proposals are believed to be going before the Teamster membership without a recommendation for acceptance or rejection from the negotiating committee.

Vancouver drivers are voting today, Vancouver Island members will vote Sunday and other votes in B.C. will be conducted during the week.

Mirabel Opening Protested

STE. SCHOLASTIQUE, Que. (CP) — Police lobbed tear gas into a group of about 300 jeering demonstrators protesting the opening today of Mirable International Airport by Prime Minister Trudeau and Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa.

The demonstrators, farmers whose land was expropriated for the airport, fled their vantage point behind a fence about 200 yards from the terminal building. No injuries were reported.

Earlier, police had prevented the group from entering airport grounds.

Police refused to comment on the incident which occurred immediately after Trudeau and Bourassa officially opened the airport.

Witnesses said the demonstrators had parked trucks containing hay near the fence.

In his opening address, Trudeau described the airport as "essential" for Montreal, for Quebec and for the whole country."

Had there been any doubts, he said "the regrettable defection which is forcing us to abandon the Pickering project would have cured us of that very quickly."

The Pickering international airport project near Toronto was shelved, at least temporarily, when the Ontario government announced last week it would not provide services to the project.

The Ontario government feared environmental damage and questioned the need for increasing Toronto's aviation facilities.

KNIGHT SUES

Knight claims unspecified damages for alleged wrongful dismissial last Jan. 14 as director of the research and development division of department of education in Victoria.

Persistence Pays Off For City Sweeps Winner

"You have to have a ticket to make a dream come true."

It was that philosophy that prompted Mrs. Floralea Wakeham of Victoria to buy every Irish sweepstake ticket she could get her hands on "as far back as I can remember."

And it paid off in thousands today.

Mrs. Wakeham, 2766 Ronald, drew a $40,600 winner in the Irish Hospitals Sweepstakes with the horse Dance All Night.

She's been holding her breath ever since The Times notified her Friday morning that her ticket bearing the pseudonym Diksu was drawn in Dublin Thursday in preparation for the Cambridgeshire Handicap at Newmarket Saturday.

Mrs. Wakeham headed off for work as usual Friday. She's supervisor of accounts payable for the B.C. Ferries and spent the day "hoping" and "rationalizing" — but mostly rationalizing.

Dance All Night wasn't considered a favorite. In fact the odds were 33-to-1 he'd place and there was no use in getting her hopes up.

She heard nothing all day and went to bed at 9 p.m.

It was this morning she heard.

Lottogrift, a 33 to 1 shot ridden by Roger Werham, won the Irish Sweeps, and one neck behind was Dance All Night.

Idiot's Delight a 50-to-1 shot, finished third, another neck back in the one-mile, 220 yard race. But the results weren't finalized yet.

After the close result Grenville Starkey, who rode Idiot's Delight, lodged a claim of foul against Dance All Night, but the objection was over-ruled after a steward's inquiry.

At 8 this morning the telegraph office confirmed her winnings.

Ulster Group Outlawed

BELFAST (UPI) — British officials today outlawed the Protestant Ulster Volunteer Force in Northern Ireland in an attempt to ward off a growing threat of civil war.

Security officials were put on alert against a new wave of bombings and assassinations following a threat by the UVF to step up their attack against the Irish Republican Army.

The extremist UVF, a loyalist Protestant group, claimed responsibility for the violence that killed at least 12 persons Thursday and Friday and British officials warned that the troubled province was moving close to civil war.

"Their actions are an offence against society," Rees said. "In consequence they no longer have the right to be treated as members of a legal organization."

Meanwhile in Limerick the giant Dutch-owned Farenka factory complied today with a major demand of the kidnappers of its managing director and closed its gates for 24 hours.

The action broke with the tough stand of the Irish government, which has announced it would not deal with the suspected Irish Republican Army raiders.

In telephone calls to the Dutch embassy and Dublin newspapers the kidnappers said they would kill Herrema unless three members of the IRA released from prison, including British [illegible] Rose Dugdale [illegible] the factory was closed [illegible] sign of good faith." Dugdale, 33, is serving a nine-year sentence for a $2 million art theft near Dublin at the home of South African millionaire Sir Alfred Beit.

Portuguese Gov't Losing Control

Times News Services

LISBON — The government is no longer in full control of Lisbon, Portuguese Prime Minister Jose Pinheiro de Azevedo said today, accusing the far left of dragging Portugal toward civil war.

Military authorities, meanwhile, closed a northern military installation where rebellious troops protested the transfer of two leftist soldiers.

"At the moment, the government does not have the complete possibility of governing in Lisbon," he said. "In Lisbon, the government faces great opposition from the extreme left and other leftists."

Azevedo said in an interview with the weekly newspaper Expresso the breakdown in military discipline "is based on leftist propaganda that has influenced some military units in Lisbon and its suburbs."

He said the breakdown in authority came dangerously close to an armed confrontation between Lisbon military units on Thursday, when the Socialists accused extreme leftists of planning a coup, but he said the situation was at least temporarily defused.

"I still fear that some individuals could be thinking about involving themselves in an adventure," he said.

The prime minister said that while a conflict between rival military units was still a possibility, he hoped to resolve disputes "without an explosion."

Postal Report Delayed

OTTAWA (CP) — The conciliation board dealing with the contract dispute between the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) and the post office has been given until Tuesday midnight to submit its report.

The extension likely will set back the earliest possible date for a postal strike to Oct. 15, if the parties do not settle.

Meanwhile, the government has taken steps to have its family allowance and pension cheques mailed out early for the second month in a row.

A government spokesman said Friday that the cheques would be delivered to the post office for mailing Monday. Normally family allowance cheques go out on the 20th of the month and pensions are sent out prior to the last three banking days in the month.

The government also sent out the cheques early in September, when there was a possibility of a strike by the 22,000 members of the union. CUPW includes mail sorters and postal clerks.

Among major issues remaining in dispute are wages, post office automation, use of casual non-union labor, hours of work and fringe benefits.

A Word from the Emperor . . .

By SALLY QUINN

WASHINGTON (WP) — To most people in the United States the White House seems a very glamorous place to be and White House dinners sound particularly exciting. What most people don't understand is that, for the president and his wife, those dinners can often be very hard work. Thursday night at the dinner for Emperor Hirohito the Fords earned their salary.

It's making conversation that's the real killer. Especially when your guests don't speak English too well. And His Majesty, the 74-year-old Emperor of the Chrysanthemum Throne, seemed prone to a number of "Ah so's" ("Oh, really," in Japanese).

There was a two-hour-long dinner, with Mrs. Ford seated between Prime Minister Fukuda and the emperor and the presidnt between the emperor and the empress.

After dinner and the entertainment, Mrs. Ford walked into the Blue Room chattering away with the empress and her translator, and the president was left with the diminutive emperor, who appears not to see very well.

President: "It's certainly warm in there."

Emperor: "Ah so."

President: "The ladies seem to be having quite a time over there."

Emperor: "Ah so."

Emperor: "Ah so."

Emperor: . . .

No Need to Beef About Price of Bacon

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

With bacon the hideous price it is these days, the shopper who actually buys the stuff on a regular basis has got to be richer or rasher than most.

But, as more and more Saanich residents are discovering, there is a cheaper way of bringing home the bacon.

It looks, smells and, to many palates, even tastes like the real thing. But it's called beef bacon.

That's right, beef bacon. And if you've never heard of it don't feel badly, for many butchers in town haven't either.

Glen Hassard, manager of Lakehill Meats Ltd. at Quadra and Reynolds, says he believes theirs is the only meat market in the Greater Victoria area selling this item, and he's obviously not unhappy about the fact.

The store has had beef bacon on its shelves for only about two months but already it's "going like a landslide," Hassard said.

"We sell about 500 pounds a week and we've run out once already this week."

Reason for the popularity is obvious, regular bacon sells for anything up to $2.89 per pound, and at those prices the crisp 'n' crackly strips have entered the caviar bracket for thousands of erstwhile consumers.

This week, Lakehill Meats was selling its beef bacon at $1.39.

Hassard said while it's a relatively new food out here, it's been around for years on the Prairies.

The long wedge of meat comes from the lower, fleshy part of the cow's belly, which is smoked and cured in the usual way and then sliced. Lakehill Meats does its own smoking and curing, a process which takes about a week.

The manager says it's a lot leaner than the bacon from your average porker. As for flavor: "With certain parts of it you can't tell the difference."

Putting that claim to the test at breakfast today, this reporter found it mostly justified. Beef bacon does lack a certain je ne sais quoi in tanginess, but it's definitely tasty.

And the more one thinks about the price, the better the flavor seems.

"But then we're pretty old-fashioned out here," he laughed.

But beef bacon was nothing new to Al Bailey, owner of Victoria Meat Market at 625 Johnson, who remembers efforts several years ago to popularize the food.

Bailey said he doesn't get more than about one customer request a year for beef bacon, and in any case he doubts there are any local packers who can supply it to the trade.

"It will always have some popularity but it doesn't have the same flavor (as regular bacon) and I don't think it will ever take its place," he said.

Who knows? If beef bacon catches on it may allow us all to get back to the old rind . . .

CPR Tracks Kept Open For Exports

The CPR said Friday afternoon it would maintain full rail connections for the benefit of Victoria industries that wished to export freight to Seattle by way of Nanaimo and Vancouver.

However, the CPR repeated its statement that it will stop the service Monday and it will not allow Seaspan access to the rail link to carry on the service on its own. Seaspan officials said they could not carry on with the service unless the CPR permits it to use the rail link as an export route.

Talks were continuing between Seaspan and the CPR on the issue.

Seaspan has its own rail line on its property but it requires the right to use the connection link, owned by the CPR, if it is going to receive loaded freight cars from Victoria industries.

The company said it decided Friday to continue honoring an agreement regarding a siding from the CPR to the property of Seaspan International Ltd. at 345 Harbor.

On Thursday night the company had said the siding might be removed.

While the siding will remain in operation, freight traffic will be in one direction only. The siding will assist companies near the Seaspan property to send freight by rail to Nanaimo, then by barge to Vancouver and then by truck to Seattle.

The Victoria Chamber of Commerce has urged the CPR to reinstitute its direct barge service to Seattle or permit Seaspan to take it over.

The reprieve of the rail link, announced Friday afternoon, does not resolve the basic issue raised by the chamber about keeping the direct barge service to Seattle in operation.

The service will be terminated Monday morning unless Seaspan and the CPR come to an agreement about the use of the rail siding over the weekend.

Victoria Chamber of Commerce president Jack Hutchins said Friday morning that Victoria industries will be at a competitive disadvantage if freight must be routed by way of the lower mainland before proceeding to Seattle.

Waves Whipped to 15-Foot Mark

Wind Capsizes Two Boats

At least two boats sank at the government wharf in Sidney Friday night as a wet and windy frontal system passed over the area.

A spokesman for the Pacific Rescue Centre said there were numerous reports of small boats in trouble as the storm whipped up the seas in the Gulf of Georgia creating 10 to 15-foot high waves.

The most serious incident occurred at about 6 p.m. when a small boat lost power, drifted into the Steveston jetty and capsized. Two people on board were saved but another two — an elderly man and woman — are missing and presumed drowned. A search for their bodies is continuing this morning.

It was a rough crossing for late travellers aboard B.C. ferries between Tsawwassen and Swartz Bay. One of them reported many passengers were seasick and the cafeteria was shut down. Passengers were advised to stay in their seats.

The Rescue Cestre said two fishing vessels flipped over in heavy seas off the mouth of the Fraser River but there was no loss of life.

Greater Victoria police said the inclement weather contributed to a number of motor vehicle accidents, mostly minor except for a mishap in Esquimalt at about 9:45 p.m. when 60-year-old Gordon Boley of 841 Esquimalt was struck by a car as he crossed the road in the 800 block Esquimalt.

Victoria fire department was called to Montgomery and Charles at 7:30 p.m. when a powerline blew down and was sparking in some trees.

A B.C. Hydro spokesman said power cuts were spotty throughout the area with William Head most severely affected. Crews worked through the night to restore power.

The Victoria Weather station said conditions tonight should be cool and clear but another weather system is approaching and should hit the area by late Sunday.

DIPHTHERIA RE-APPEARS

Diphtheria has once again appeared in Greater Victoria with two confirmed cases in the past two weeks, Dr. Allan Arneil, regional health officer, said Friday.

The once-dreaded disease, still classified as dangerous, has broken out locally over fall and winter in recent years, only to disappear in the spring.

Arneil said its reappearance is an occasion to remind parents once more that children should be immunized at community health clinics or by the family doctor. An immunization program through the schools provides booster shots every five years but the first shot should be given at pre-school age, he said.

One of the current cases was an infection of the skin while the other was found by the more common throat swab.

People who have been immunized can still contract the disease but are protected from the virulent toxin it produces. Frequently the only symptom in such cases will be a sore throat.

But such people can serve as carriers and the danger is they can infect others who have not been immunized. Diphtheria is highly contageous.

Arneil said that apart from treatment with drugs, standard practice is to quarantine victims and their immediate family for at least 10 days.

While this is a considerable inconvenience to some, it is also essential because it is still a dangerous disease, he said.

Experts, TV Make 'Square Society'

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Children model themselves after others — if not parents, then someone else. Who are children imitating these days?

And why?

Because children around the world are adopting more models in common, television characters like Mannix who reach vast audiences unknown to earlier generations.

Then there's the little league coach, the cub master, the teacher, the driving instructor — in a word, the "expert."

Most parents say: "I want the best for my children. So they get the experts to teach them, forgetting the expert also serves as a model.

Ney suggests all this poses a significent question: who are the real parents of today's children, the natural parents, or someone else?

And whatever answer you come up with, is this what you want?

He says the evidence that violence on television begets violence is simply overwhelming. And truth to tell it's not just chidlren but adults too who are much more influenced than they will admit by the bigger-than-life models.

"Children and Violence — social models for anti-scoial behavior" is the topic of a husband and wife team of speakers at a public lecture next Friday.

Drs. Robert and Linda Peterson, from the department of psychology at the University of Nevada, have researched the subject for many years, Ney says.

They will speak at Oak Bay junior high school Oct. 10 at 8 p.m. Admission is $2.

Before that the Petersons will take part in a seminar and workshops for professionals in the field dealing with contemporary therapies for troubled children.

That program, next Wednesday to Friday at the Eric Martin Institute is being presented by the department of psychiatry at Royal Jubilee Hospital.

Ney said it is for teachers, nurses, social workers, doctors, child care workers, law enforcement officers, school counsellors and probation officers and will teach a variety of techniques, borrowed or developed, which staff at EMI's children's unit have found successful.

Vic West Man Fights Tel Error

Inflation, they say it is.

And costs of just about everything leap with such astounding frequency that it's almost impossible to keep track of the increases.

But then Fellowes Hewett is making a pretty good job of keeping tabs on one big firm — the British Columbia Telephone Co. Ltd. — and on the increases it has made and hopes to make.

Fellowes who?

Who's he when he's in town? Or out of town, as the case is more likely to be. Like last week when he was over in Vancouver presenting his submissions to a Canadian Transport Commission hearing on whether a new 20-per-cent rate increase sought by B.C. Tel should be granted or not.

Well, Fellowes Hewett is a thinking man who lives in a boarding house in Vic West and who likes to think he is representing the interests of all the little men and women in B.C.

Telephone rates were increased by 10 per cent Aug. 1 and Commission committee chairman Guy Roberge said a decision on the present application should be ready "about mid-October."

The increase was opposed by the B.C. attorney-general's department because it felt the company "hasn't acted in the public interest."

Fellowes, who first appeared at CTC hearings with a 25-page brief last year, says he isn't for or against a rate increase, and he isn't fighting B.C. Tel at all — he's fighting a mistake they made.

In 1972, he explains, B.C. Tel restructured its rates, introducing one rate for DDD (direct distance dialing) calls and another rate for operator-assisted calls. He isn't against that.

"But instead of putting a straight 15-cent surcharge for operator handling, they came up with a completely separate rate structure which produced 67 wildly varying surcharges," he complains.

On a three-minute call, says Hewett, the effective surcharge ranges from two cents to $1.31. And above that, the overtime minutes are charged at a higher rate — anywhere from one and-a-half cents to 23½ cents per minute for the overtime.

"This more than doubles the price of the call," he says.

"I demonstrated in my 1974 brief that, because there is no discount minutes, calls over overtime minutees, calls over three minutes are higher in B.C. than the trans-continental rate," says Fellows.

For example, he says, it's 46½ cents across B.C. compared with 30 cents per minute across Canada.

"On a three-minute call, it's cheaper to phone across B.C.," he admits. "But as soon as you start running into overtime, your longer calls become much more expensive here.

"If you talk long enough, it would be cheaper, in fact, to call Victoria froma motel in Newfoundland than it would to phone Victoria from Abbotsford — and that's just ridiculous.

"All this is because there were two separate rate structures instead of a simple fee for operator handling — to which they are entitled," Hewett insists.

HEWETT
. . . keeping tabs

Fellowes says he has shown B.C. Tel how it can eliminate the excess charges on evening and late night calls for operator handling and recoup the annual loss of $1.8 million by adding three cents to the first minute of every DDD call, thus producing a more equitable distribution of charges.

But at the hearings, the company said in evidence that it does not have the data, nor the system to produce it, to make the changes.

When the hearings ended, Anne Carver, one of the commissioners, made special mention of Hewett's "generous gift of time and intelligence" to the deliberations.

And when you sit down for a long chat with Fellowes Hewett, you get to realize that time and intelligence are two things he had plenty of.

Born in England of Canadian parents, Hewett says he "feels 35" and won't confess to being any older. He's retired, but you're not quiet sure what from. Never "career-oriented", he served as a navigator-instructor in the Royal Canadian Air Force in the Second World War and later did a multitude of things. He was a hardrock miner in the Great Bear Lake area, a sailor, a salesman and now he edits a small community newspaper. Soon he is opening a consultancy in partnership with another Victoria resident.

Money is something he doesn't have much of. But it doesn't bother him. He is on welfare ("an absolutely essential stepping stone") right now, usually hitch-hikes when he goes over to the hearings and places little importance on appearances.

Clad in simple clothes, Fellowes rolls himself a cigarette from tobacco he carries in an old tin that still has the strawberry jam label, leans back and says:

"Life is beautiful."

"I feel it's every citizen's duty to fight for the correction of a mistake or an injustice," he says simply.

"The fundamental lesson I have learned is that we must destroy for all time the myth that you can't beat the system," he says.

Extra Funds For Project

An additional grant of $23,608 for the St. John's Court Society 18-unit housing project at 1613 Quadra in Victoria, has been approved by Housing Minister Lorne Nicolson.

It is to help meet extra costs amounting to $70,824. The province's original grant was for $131,333.

Ask the Times

Q. I would like to know if it is possible in this country for a non-Canadian citizen to hold political office as either prime minister or premier. R.N.

A. Both federal and provincial elections acts require that candidates for office be qualified as voters. A voter in provincial elections can be either a Canadian citizen or British subject. In federal elections the voter — and thus the candidate — must be a Canadian citizen.

Q. Who started the Red Cross? T.R.

A. The founder of the International Red Cross was Jean Henri Dunant, a Swiss philanthropist. He was touring Italy in 1859 during the Austro-Sardinian War when he saw the field at Solferino the day after 40,000 men had been killed or wounded in battle. Horrified at the suffering of the wounded, he formed a group of volunteers to help them.

Q. Where did the term Indian summer originate? R.O.

A. The origin of the name Indian summer is uncertain. One story says that the American settlers named the period after the American Indians, who told the settlers that this period would come. Another story says that the settlers used the name because this period of good weather gave the war-like Indians a chance to make more attacks on the settlers. The settlers also believed that the smokiness of Indian summer came from fires that the Indians built on the prairies.

Smooth Switch In Bridge Patrol

The switchover from full-time to part-time manning of the Johnson Street Bridge appears to have been accomplished smoothly, city engineer John Sansom said Friday.

"We're bound to run into one or two minor teething problems but so far everything is going well and we think we have covered all major eventualities," he said.

Effective midnight last Tuesday the bridge operation changed to a new schedule which will see it manned for only 79 hours per week instead of the former round-the-clock service.

An operator is now on duty for bridge lifting on weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and from 6 p.m. to midnight; on Saturdays and Sundays from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Marine users who require the bridge to be lifted at any other time must give 24 hours' notice and pay $50 per lift.

Sansom said an emergency telephone service has been set up so that vessels delayed at sea which won't arrive at a time when the bridge is normally manned can make the necessary arrangements.

Similarly, if there is a disaster at sea requiring the immediate despatch of a rescue vessel, "we can get a man down there to work the bridge as quickly as they can man a tug," he said.

Among the happiest about the new schedule are the two full-time bridge operators, said the city engineer.

"They don't work any fewer hours but at least they are regular hours — and there's no crummy graveyard shift."

Two other employees formerly required for the bridge operation have been switchel to other jobs in the department.

Firehall Fate Decision Near

Saanich council is expected to decide Monday on the future use of the old Saanich N. 3 firehall on Shelbourne, vacated by the fire brigade some 18 months ago.

"Quite a few" bids for use of the building have been received from community organizations, according to Saanich municipal clerk Gordon Hayward.

He said a recommendation from council's lands committee will go before council Monday, but he declined to elaborate.

One of the applicants, The Warehouse Alternative School, has voiced concern that council may have rejected its bid for use of the hall.

Veronica Doyle, a co-ordinator of the alternative school, temporarily housed in the Sacred Heart Parish Hall, 4040 Nelthorpe, said Friday the school has finally received funding from the provincial government.

Funding had been in jeopardy, but about $49,000 was awarded to the project by the human resources and education departments, she said. Now organizers are looking for a permanent location for the school and the firehall would be just perfect, she addel.

She said she is certain that if council was aware of the benefits of the school, council would accept their bid of $300 a month rental of the hall. They could raise the bid, but not a lot more.

The alternative school provides instruction for some 60 high school and adult students who found it difficult to learn in regular school situations. It operates under contract to the Saanich School District and started some three years ago.

PREAMBLE

Shawnigan Lake School has operated a biological sewage treatment system since 1959. Laboratory tests indicated that a good level of treatment is currently being provided. Effluent from this system discharges to a ditch which eventually finds its way to Shawnigan Creek.

The present application, published below, proposes that the treated effluent from the current system be discharged underground to tile disposal fields located on school property, in place of the current discharge to Shawnigan Creek. A three-year phase-out period is proposed in view of the Cowichan Valley Regional District's studies for overall sewage disposal, which are currently underway.

Envelope Contains Moonman's Answer

They all ask the same question — whether a 12-year-old at a supermarket in Scranton, Pa., or Queen Elizabeth in a private audience at Buckingham Palace.

"How do you go to the bathroom out in space?

To illustrate his answer U.S. astronaut James Lovell travels the speaking circuit with a manilla envelope — and he brought it with him to Victoria this week when he addressed some 500 people at UVic.

The 47-year-old navy captain is plain, dryly humorous, informative and understates his command role in Apollo 13 — "the flight that failed."

"I should have known then . . ." he told the campus crowd.

But before he proceeded with his crisp account of that dramatic attempt at a third moon landing he dispelled anyone's preconceived idea of what an astronaut is.

Oh sure, the spacecraft is equipped with a tape system that plays the Richard Strauss theme used in the film 2001: A Space Odyssey and Aquarius from the rock musical Hair — but the manilla envelope . . .

Lovell opened the brown paper package and took out a plastic pouch with an adhesive collar arround the open end — "the official Apollo toilet."

The aim of the individual is equally important — even during a multi-million dollar expedition with all eyes of the world on you, he said, holding the apparatus above the podium in the old gym.

The problem wasn't worked on by National Aeronautics and Space Association engineers earlier in the space program when flights lasted less than a day, he said, but with longer journeys of several days the need for simple and efficient waste disposal became evident.

Lovell, a tall sober-looking man whose face at times breaks into a broad grin, described to the snickering crowd one early solution which entailed placing iron filings in space food and supplying a magnetized metal potty.

"If you've ever eaten food containing iron filings you'll know why this idea was abandoned," he said.

After establishing his down-to-earth rapport with the audience the astronaut said he had spent time in Eastern Canada (his father was born in Toronto) but that he enjoyed this rare visit to Vancouver Island — a lush contrast to his hot and dusty Southern home.

The rest is history and the gathering remained hushed as the veteran of four major space flights recounted the six-day voyage which, 100,000 miles away from earth travelling at thousands of miles per hour, turned into a chilling ordeal.

In preparation for a moon landing, Lovell and fellow spacemen Jack Swigert and Fred Haise had just pulled the Apollo craft from a trajectory that wouldd have taken them around the moon and back home.

"I looked up at Haise and realized he hadn't made the noise . . . at the control panel Swigert's eyes were getting wider and wider."

Lovell's pulse raced from 70 to 130 heartbeats per minute — a gash ran down the length of the service module like a long slice in the hull of a ship. The one remaining oxygen tank had sustained a slow leak.

The spacecraft was steered around the lunar surface out of the moon's gravitational pull to avoid a crash landing.

The trio scrambled into the cramped quarters of the lunar module and activated its independent support systems since the command module was immobilized.

Using the tiny module as the cockpit for the inoperative bulk of the command and service units, Lovell navigated manually to the re-entry point.

Had he not attained the critical angle necessary for entry the craft would have either incinerated penetrating the atmosphere or bounced off it and gone into perpetual orbit. From that point on the landing was routine — almost an anticlimax to the abortive mission.

There are no candid comments on failure or personal fear on record from the three crewmen — however there was one complaint.

Lovell, displaying his plastic pouch at UVic Thursday, also took a small, neatly-folded square of tissue paper from the envelope.

"This was not sufficient . . ." he said with his characteristic grin.

LOVELL . . . answers question

15-Year Term For Robbery

CALGARY (CP) — Guy Marcel Smith of St. Jerome, Que., who earlier pleaded guilty to kidnapping a bank manager and his wife, July 4 and robbing the husband's bank of $245,059, was sentenced Friday to 15 years in a federal penitentiary.

In handing down the sentence, Provincial Judge Douglas McDonald said he found "room for mitigation" in the circumstances of the case which tended to balance the serious nature of the five kidnapping and robbery charges.

RADAR SYSTEM FOR THE BIRDS

TORONTO (CP) — The National Research Council (NRC) is testing a radar system to help air traffic controllers warn pilots about birds, a council researcher said.

F. R. Hunt told an international electronics conference that the most serious bird hazards exist only a few months a year — primarily during migrations — so it is difficult to justify expensive new radar solely to detect birds.

He said there has been only one air crash in Canada known to have been caused by hitting a bird. Three persons were killed in that crash.

However, Dr. Hunt said, the Canadian forces have lost planes after hitting birds, although the pilots have safely bailed out.

He said birds almost caused the crash of a Boeing 737 near Winnipeg a few years ago and bird damage to engines costs Air Canada and CP Air about $200,000 a year.

Dr. Hunt said the NRC is testing a prototype system that would analyze the density of birds in an area and calculate the probability of hitting a bird.

Spain Nabs Danish Freighter

COPENHAGEN (UPI) — Spanish authorities have detained a Danish freighter and its crew in the northern Spanish port of Pasages, the Danish government said today.

Foreign Minister K. B. Andersen said Spanish authorities put troops aboard the 8,000-ton Mercandian Seas Friday preventing it from putting to sea. The action was apparently in retaliation for a European boycott of Spanish shipping.

"It is quite clearly an illegal act committed by Spanish authorities who have put terrible pressure on the captain and his crew," the Danish foreign minister said.

Anderson said he and prime minister Anger Joergensen "are following the situation with extreme seriousness and are pulling out all stops to help the Danish ship."

Andersen did not detail the pressure he said had been put on the ship's skipper, E. Karlskov, and the crew. The ship flies a Danish flag and is registered in Copenhagen.

The ship's owner, Per Henriksen, said the Spanish action apparently was in retaliation for the refusal of dockers in several European countries to service Spanish vessels.

Guillotine Execution For Youth

BEAUVAIS, France (AP) — Bruno T., 17, was sentenced Friday in juvenile court to death by guillotine for the brutal murder of a 65-year-old widow.

Legal experts said two youths were guillotined during the Second World War under a state of siege, but the only other instances they recalled dated back to 1889.

Three other minors were found guilty of complicity in the case. Two of them were sentenced to 20 years in prison and the third to 12 years. French law prohibits revealing the names of minors involved in court cases.

The court was told the four youths escaped from a reformatory, beat and kicked Simone Boursier, of the village of Liancourt, when she refused to tell them where her savings were hidden, then stabbed her 17 times.

Ten persons have died on the French guillotine — the country's only method of capital punishment — since 1964, all for murdering children or prison guards.

Elections Slated

DACCA, Bangladesh (AP) — President Khondakar Mushtaque Ahmed announced Friday his government will hold general elections in 1977 to restore parliamentary democracy. In a broadcast, he said full political activities will be allowed next year.

Policemen Killed

BANGKOK (Reuter) — Five policemen were killed and five wounded in a communist guerrilla ambush in southern Thailand, police said Friday. It was the third major clash this year between communist insurgents and government forces in southern Thailand.

Wars Yield Benefits To Medical Research

HALIFAX (CP) — Medical research benefitted from the American experience in the Vietnam war and the same will probably be true with every major military conflict in the future.

The First World War introduced plastic surgery.

The Second World War introduced infectious disease control.

That's the view of Dr. Thomas De Kornfeld, a University of Michigan professor, who said the Vietnam war focused the attention of medical researchers on adult respiratory distress syndrome (ARDS).

The syndrome was noticed when combatants suffering injury frequently died of lung failure.

Dr. Kornfeld said the syndrome is caused by a variety of conditions; shock, sepsis, aspiration, fat embolization, renal failure—all leading to a condition which causes stagnation of blood flow.

Any damage to lung tissue leads to fluid in the lungs and a vicious cycle is established—the area is unsuited for gas exchange and capillary emboli leads to increased pressure on the heart.

Studies in Vietnam showed 85 per cent of those with severe heart injuries died of ARDS. However, if the spinal cord had been severed high up so that the person was a quadriplegic, the respiratory distress sydrome did not develop.

"This gave us the first clue," Dr. Kornfeld said. "This was proof that for this business to develop you had to have in intact nervous system."

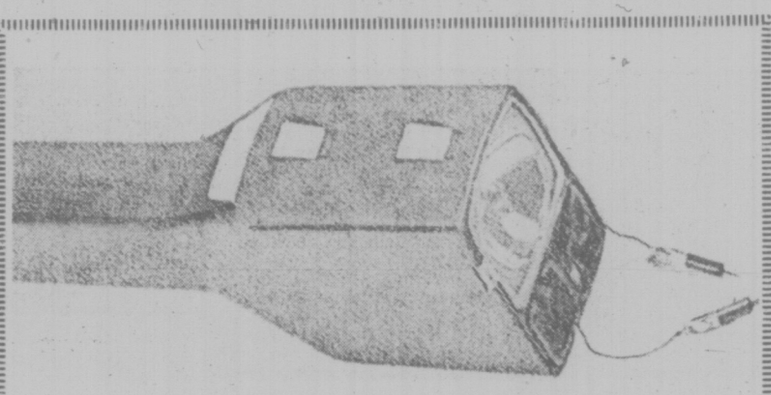
Teamsters Reject Propane Contract



WEAPON A SHOCKER

REDONDO BEACH, Calif. (UPI) — Michael Mattingly, 24, and a friend heard noises Thursday in the garage below Mattingly's apartment. When they investigated they surprised burglars who were stealing a motorcycle, bicycle and car parts.

Then a flashlight shone in his eyes, Mattingly told police, and he heard what sounded like "the pop of a .22" and felt stinging sensations in his abdomen and arm.

An instant later, an electric shock coursed through his body, bringing him to his knees as the burglars fled.

Mattingly thus became the second person to be on the wrong end of the Taser, a new electric dart gun, in criminal hands.

Recently, a woman in Miami, Fla., robbed a gas station and used aTaser to immobilize an attendant who described the sensation as "like sticking your finger in a wall socket . . . the worst pain I ever felt."

The device may gain popularity with criminals who want to avoid charges of committing a crime with a deadly weapon — the Taser immobilizes but does not kill.

The weapon, manufactured by Advanced Chemical Technology of Arcadia, Calif., fires two barbs attached to 18 feet of wire. When they pierce the skin, the operator can sendcan send a 50,000 volt electrical charge into the target's body from the Taser's six batteries, causing uncontrollable spasms. The operator can turn the current on and off, controling the victim as long as the barbs, which do no serious harm themselves, remain imbedded in the skin.

More than 1,000 have been sold and the firm is now producing 200 a week.

Lower Mainland propane truck drivers, members of the Teamsters' Union, today rejected a proposed contract settlement, almost assuring government intervention to end the strike that has dried up provincial propane supplies.

Teamster spokesman Peter Moslinger said today he has notified Labor Minister Bill King of the rejection vote by members of Local 351 of the Teamsters Union, but has not yet received a reply.

King said earlier he would recommend "unspecified" government action if the proposed settlement was not passed by the union or Transport Labor Relations Association, bargaining agent for the propane companies.

Government action could include back-to-work legislation, or the imposition of some kind of binding arbitration.

Teamsters involved in the propane industry all over the province have been either locked out or on strike since July 21, resulting in emergency conditions in Nanaimo as 1,400 homes ran out of cooking and heating fuel last week.

The Lower Mainland Teamsters were the first to vote and their rejection has cancelled other votes in the province.

Moslinger said the votes were cancelled because King said earlier that he would take action if one of the bargaining units rejected the offer.

Shuffle Reaction Mixed

Social Credit leader Bill Bennett latched on to a neat analogy and dubbed Premier Barrett a joker who "can't end a three year losing streak because he's used the same old deck to deal another bad hand for the people of B.C."

Barrett just re-arranged an incompetent cabinet, said Bennett, and the moves will do nothing to solve the problems of B.C.

The only positive change Bennett said he saw in the new cabinet postings is that Agriculture Minister Dave Stupich, as the new finance minister, can "at least add."

Bennett said he saw "no improvement" in the shifting of the mines portfolio from Leo Nimsick to Economic Development Minister Gary Lauk and said he has no reason to believe Delta MLA Carl Liden will be an improvement as transport and communications minister.

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson said he is glad Nimsick is now travel minister "because he created a lot of closed down mines and now he can promote them as tourist attractions."

Both Gibson and Tory leader Scott Wallace had kind words for Robert Strachan who resigned as transport minister and is heading for London to serve as B.C.'s agent-general.

"I don't want to say anything in the slightest negative about Strachan now that he's gone," said Gibson.

His appointment, said Gibson, "is recognition of a long and distinguished life of public service in B.C."

The Liberal said he wished Liden luck in his new post and "almost anybody" would be better than Barrett as finance minister.

As for the mines portfolio, Gibson said changing ministers will not help — the government must reverse its mining taxation policies.

Wallace said the changes mark an improvement and strengthening of the cabinet but he, like others, was disappointed to see more double portfolios.

The combination of mining and economic development under Lauk will be a heavy one, he said, as will agriculture and finance under Stupich.

Wallace said it was sad to see Strachan dumped from the cabinet after his 22 years of service as an MLA, espe-

SURVIVOR of the fire and explosions at the Burrard Terminals Ltd. grain elevator in North Vancouver Friday is helped away to an ambulance. (See story on page 2.)

Gunmen Attack Airport

BEIRUT (AP) — Arab terrorists attacked Beirut International Airport today, spraying Lebanese security men and civilians with machine-gun fire in an apparent attempt to hijack an airliner. Police said three persons were killed and 14 wounded.

One of the gunmen was among those killed in a shoot-out with police and army commandos guarding the terminal. Two other gunmen were wounded and captured.

Police and Palestinian guerrilla sources said the gunmen probably wanted to use the hijacking to sabotage the Sinai peace accord between Egypt and Israel. There was also speculation they wanted to disrupt the ceasefire in Lebanon's factional warfare between Christians and Moslems.

The Palestine news agency WAFA said a fourth terrorist, who drove the car that carried the gunmen to the airport, was later turned over to police by the security arm of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Unofficial sources said the terrorists carried papers showing two of them to be Palestinian, one Syrian and one Libyan.

Police said an army commando and an Egyptian woman waiting for a flight to Cairo were also killed. Besides the two gunmen, the wounded included six Egyptians, a Lebanese airline employee, four policemen and an army commando.

Mirabel Opening Protested

STE. SCHOLASTIQUE, Que. (CP) — Police lobbed tear gas into a group of about 300 jeering demonstrators protesting the opening today of Mirable International Airport by Prime Minister Trudeau and Quebec Premier Robert Bourassa.

The demonstrators, farmers whose land was expropriated for the airport, fled their vantage point behind a fence about 200 yards from the terminal building. No injuries were reported.

Earlier, police had prevented the group from entering airport grounds.

Police refused to comment on the incident which occurred immediately after Trudeau and Bourassa officially opened the airport.

Witnesses said the demonstrators had parked trueks containing hay near the fence.

In his opening address, Trudeau described the airport as "essential for Montreal, for Quebec and for the whole country."

Had there been any doubts, he said "the regrettable defection which is forcing us to abandon the Pickering project would have cured us of that very quickly."

The Pickering international airport project near Toronto was shelved, at least temporarily, when the Ontario government announced last week it would not provide services to the project.

The Ontario government feared environmental damage and questioned the need for increasing Toronto's aviation facilities.

Persistence Pays Off For City Sweeps Winner

"You have to have a ticket to make a dream come true."

It was that philosophy that prompted Mrs. Floralea Wakeham of Victoria to buy every Irish sweepstake ticket she could get her hands on "as far back as I can remember."

And it paid off in thousands today.

Mrs. Wakeham, 2766 Ronald, drew a $40,600 winner in the Irish Hospitals Sweepstakes with the horse Dance All Night.

She's been holding her breath ever since The Times notified her Friday morning that her ticket bearing the pseudonym Riksu was drawn in Dublin Thursday in preparation for the Cambridgeshire Handicap at Newmarket run today.

Mrs. Wakeham headed off for work as usual Friday. She's supervisor of accounts payable for the B.C. Ferries and spent the day "hoping" and "rationalizing" — but mostly rationalizing.

Dance All Night wasn't considered a favorite. In fact the odds were 33-to-1 he'd place and there was no use in getting her hopes up.

She heard nothing all day and went to bed at 9 p.m.

It was this morning she heard.

Lottogrift, a 33 to 1 shot ridden by Roger Werham, won the Irish Sweeps, and one neck behind was Dance All Night.

Idiot's Delight a 50-to-1 shot, finished third, another neck back in the one-mile, 220 yard race. But the results weren't finalized yet.

After the close result Grenville Starkey, who rode Idiot's Delight, lodged a claim of foul against Dance All Night, but the objection was over-ruled after a steward's inquiry.

At 8 this morning the telegraph office confirmed her winnings.

Four Canadians — three from B.C. — had tickets on Lottogift.

MARSEILLE (UPI) — Five patients were killed by a flash fire in a clinic for respiratory ailments police said today.

TURNER STAYS

OTTAWA (CP) — Former finance minister John Turner has told his riding executive he wants to hold on to his seat in the House of Commons indefinitely.

When Turner resigned his finance portfolio in September, he said he woud quit the Commons when an "orderly transition" could be made.

Ulster Group Outlawed

BELFAST (UPI) — British officials today outlawed the Protestant Ulster Volunteer Force in Northern Ireland in an attempt to ward off a growing threat of civil war.

Security officials were put on alert against a new wave of bombings and assassinations following a threat by the UVF to step up their attack against the Irish Republican Army.

The extremist UVF, a loyalist Protestant group, claimed responsibility for the violence that killed at least 12 persons Thursday and Friday and British officials warned that the troubled province was moving close to civil war.

"Their actions are an offence against society," Rees said. "In consequence they no longer have the right to be treated as members of a legal organization."

Meanwhile in Limerick the giant Dutch-owned Farenka factory complied today with a major demand of the kidnappers of its managing director and closed its gates for 24 hours.

The action broke with the tough stand of the Irish government, which has announced it would not deal with the suspected Irish Republican Army raiders.

In telephone calls to the Dutch embassy and Dublin newspapers the kidnappers said they would kill Herrema unless three members of the IRA were released from prison — including British heiress Bridget Rose Dugdale — and the factory was closed "as a sign of good faith." Dugdale, 33, is serving a nine-year sentence for a $20 million art theft near Dublin at the home of South African millionaire Sir Alfred Beit.

Portuguese Gov't Losing Control

Times News Services

LISBON — The government is no longer in full control of Lisbon, Portuguese Prime Minister Jose Pinheiro de Azevedo said today, accusing the far left of dragging Portugal toward civil war.

Military authorities, meanwhile, closed a northern military installation where rebellious troops protested the transfer of two leftist soldiers.

"At the moment, the government does not have the complete possibility of governing in Lisbon," he said. "In Lisbon, the government faces great opposition from the extreme left and other leftists."

Azevedo said in an interview with the weekly newspaper Expresso the breakdown in military discipline "is based on leftist propaganda that has influenced some military units in Lisbon and its suburbs."

He said the breakdown in authority came dangerously close to an armed confrontation between Lisbon military units on Thursday, when the Socialists accused extreme leftists of planning a coup, but he said the situation was at least temporarily defused.

"I still fear that some individuals could be thinking about involving themselves in an adventure," he said.

The prime minister said that while a conflict between rival military units was still a possibility, he hoped to resolve disputes "without an explosion."

Postal Report Delayed

OTTAWA (CP) — The conciliation board dealing with the contract dispute between the Canadian Union of Postal Workers (CUPW) and the post office has been given until Tuesday midnight to submit its report.

The extension likely will set back the earliest possible date for a postal strike to Oct. 15, if the parties do not settle.

Meanwhile, the government has taken steps to have its family allowance and pension cheques mailed out early for the second month in a row.

A government spokesman said Friday that the cheques would be delivered to the post office for mailing Monday. Normally family allowance cheques go out on the 20th of the month and pensions are sent out prior to the last three banking days in the month.

The government also sent out the cheques early in September, when there was a possibility of a strike by the 22,000 members of the union. CUPW includes mail sorters and postal clerks.

Among major issues remaining in dispute are wages, post office automation, use of casual non-union labor, hours of work and fringe benefits.

KNIGHT SUES

Knight claims unspecified damages for alleged wrongful dismissal last Jan. 14 as director of the research and development division of department of education in Victoria.

ATHENS (Reuter) — An underground organization who says it represents Greek army officers today demanded that Premier Constantine Karamanlis quit, and threatened to overthrow him by force if he fails to do so.

By SALLY QUINN

WASHINGTON (WP) — To most people in the United States the White House seems a very glamorous place to be and White House dinners sound particularly exciting. What most people don't understand is that, for the president and his wife, those dinners can often be very hard work. Thursday night at the dinner for Emperor Hirohito the Fords earned their salary.

It's making conversation that's the real killer. Especially when your guests don't speak English too well. And His Majesty, the 74-year-old Emperor of the Chrysanthemum Throne, seemed prone to a number of "Ah so's" ("Oh, really," in Japanese).

There was a two-hour-long dinner, with Mrs. Ford seated between Prime Minister Fukuda and the emperor and the president between the emperor and the empress.

After dinner and the entertainment, Mrs. Ford walked into the Blue Room chattering away with the empress and her translator, and the president was left with the diminutive emperor, who appears not to see very well.

President: "It's certainly warm in there."

Emperor: "Ah so."

President: "The ladies seem to be having quite a time over there."

Emperor: "Ah so."

Emperor: "Ah so."

Emperor: . . .

Oh well, you know the rest.
